—By Arthur Brisbane—

(Copyright, 1922, Star Company.)

"Airplanes will be used to destroy pests that ruin forests." That announcement means a great deal. In America the chestnut trees have practically vanished, and other varieties, including some pines, are in danger of destruction.

Any attack on the enemy seemed hopeless—no use in trying to spray vast forest lands. But the flying men will drop above the trees bombs containing gases destructive to the tree destroyers, yet harmless to men and animals. And one single bomb will save thousands of trees and destroy a billion of pests.

Bombs will be used in this useful way, long after men have forgotten that they ever used poison bombs to kill each other. And wholesale germ destruction from the air may mean the solution of one great problem—the destruction of man's microscopic enemies. His big enemies, mammoth and lion, wolf and bear, savage men fought with flints and knives. His more deadly, invisible enemies he will attack with chemicals, and then good-bye germs. Progress always.

From Heliopolis, Egypt, to Bagdad is 1,009 miles. Slowly, for 10,000 years and longer, the camels and weary men on foot traveled the long, hot road. Animals and men dropped in the desert along the trail on a journey that lasted months. Now British flying men make the trip regularly in ten hours.

Half way on the desert journey, at El Jid, the airmen drop down beside a group of wells. One flier found an Arab sheik, his caravan scattered, himself desperately wounded by brigands. He had concluded his private arrangements with Mohammed, agent for Allah, and was resigned to death, being several weeks' journey from any help. The airman picked him up, loaded him in four hours in the Bagdad hospital, where he was patched up. He lives now to tell of a traveling machine more wonderful than Mohammed's A-1-Borak, that carried him from Mecca to Jerusalem and then up to heaven. Borak, according to tradition, was part horse, part ass, with a human face, two wings and a tail like a peacock, but he was nothing compared with a good biplane.

Nevertheless that sheik will continue to believe in an A-1-Borak and his rider. What we believe up to seven years of age we always believe more or less. That's why it is so important to keep young children free of superstition.

There is a new president in China. Li Yuan-Hung succeeds Hsu Shih Chang, resigned. A rival president in Hong Kong denounces Li Yuan as a traitor. A couple of million men will fight about it, thousands will be killed and famine made worse.

Five hundred million Chinese human beings are involved. And to us it means less than the fact that the Canadian champion Holstein cow has just set a record of 32,633 pounds of milk, 1,439 pounds of butter in one year.

Canada is near us, we understand milk, butter and cows. China is far away, we do not understand the Chinese. The parliament of man and federation of the world are still distant.

C. M. Hutchins, Harvard student from North Carolina, has amazed the world of learning. Examined for three hours by thirteen professors before taking his degree as doctor of philosophy, he answered every question 100 per cent. correctly. Hutchins knows fifteen languages and will learn some more.

Wonderful is the human mind and its power to absorb. But more important than learning many things is adding just ONE thing to the sum total of knowledge.

The Wright brothers could speak only English, and that not too well. But they added the item FLYING to what men know. That is what counts—what y u give out, not what you take in.

The New York Curb Stock Exchange is warned by Mr. Untermyer that if it continues dealing in stock of the North American Steel Company he will have everybody indicted. But how can he? It is true that the stock does not yet exist, those that sell it haven't got it, those that buy it do not receive it.

What of that? The Supreme Court has decided that Congress itself cannot interfere with men that speculate in grain and cotton, although the seller does not possess what he sells, or the buyer get what he buys. And often the gamble is in crops yet to be planted.

Can Untermyer and his Lockwood committee rise above the Supreme Court and interfere with gambling? Not likely. Little men gambling, or little stakes, yes. They are controlled easily enough. But not the big fellows.

Senator Borah objects to the bill against lynching because it is unconstitutional, interfering with rights of States. If the bill should pass the Supreme Court,

An indication of the size of the crowd was shown when caterers estimated 14,000 bottles of champagne and 15 tons of ice were consumed.

MINISTER FINED AND JAILED IN LIQUOR CASE

Bridgeport, Ct., June 13.—Rev. Genaro Striano, who formerly conducted a mission here, was fined $200, and given 60 days in jail today, charged with keeping liquor with intent to sell. "Under no circumstances will I suspend execution of the sentence," said Judge Arthur M. Comley, in reply to a plea of the minister's counsel. "I believe this plant was one of the sources of supply for small dealers. It is more vital to strike at the source of supply than at the peddlers."

DYNAMITE PAWTUXET RESERVOIR

State Troops Called to Coventry When Plot on the Mill Water Supply Is Found

Providence, June 13.—Rushing of National Guard troops from strike duty in Pawtuxet Valley villages to the Flat River Reservoir in the town of Coventry revealed the fact today that an attempt had been made to dynamite the south gate in the dam at the reservoir, which supplies many of the textile mills with water.

A case of fifty sticks of the explosive was apparently used, according to State officials who made an investigation. Had the attempt been successful, the officials added, 2,000,000,000 gallons of water in the reservoir would have been loosed upon Washington, Anthony, Quidnick, Centreville, Arctic, Riverpoint and other villages along the Pawtuxet River Valley.

The dynamite was exploded back of the cast iron casing of the gate. It tore out a large part of the casing, ripped away several feet in cement facing, destroyed the timbers around it and broke the spindle that holds the gate in place. The gate, instead of blowing out, fell across the face of a staunch set of tubes just ahead of it, so that no water could escape.

Discovery of the attempt to wreck the gate was made by the keeper of the reservoir. State authorities were notified, but, in an effort to apprehend those responsible, withheld all information until today. Eleven unexploded sticks of dynamite were found near the scene.

NAVY REFUSES TO GIVE UP LAWHORN

District Attorney Endicott Peabody Saltonstall of Middlesex County today received word from the Navy Department, that they would not surrender Private John Lawhorn, U. S. M. C., who was accused of being implicated in the murder of Ralph Brewster, Winchester station agent.

Lawhorn, now at Quantico, Va., was accused by Charles Tindall, a former marine, at present in East Cambridge jail waiting trial on a larceny charge.

The official report of the inquest held May 3 into the death of Ralph W. Brewster was filed today by Special Justice John C. McGuire of the Woburn Police Court in the Superior Court of East Cambridge.

The report of the inquest states that Brewster was killed by an unknown assailant. There did not seem to be a robbery motive, the report stated, inasmuch as the money in the cash drawer and safe were found intact.

What Lomasney's Order Calls For In Curley Investigation

"Ordered, that the Finance Commission for the city of Boston be requested to furnish to the House of Representatives, for its information, copies of extracts from their various annual reports and that the same be printed as a House document as follows:

"The order then enumerates the list of subjects that the Finance Commission must submit to the House. These subjects include the lease of the swanboat concessions in the Public Garden to relatives of Mark Angell, the laying out of Dunsmer road and Hill Top street, in Roxbury, near Mark Angell's junk shop; the sale of old prointe building to Angell and the lease of the refreshment privilege at Franklin Park to Angell's relatives.

It includes the investigation of the use of Tylose, a floor preservative, on the floors of the Boston public buildings during Curley's first term, the investigation of the city's bonding business and the Strandway and Old Harbor improvements.

CITY INSURANCE.

The alleged monopoly in passing out the insurance on city property to a firm in which P. J. and E. F. Fitzgerald and Francis L. Daly, the Mayor's former business partner, were interested, and the purchase by Mayor Curley of the land for his Jamaicaway mansion are included.

Curley was charged by Henry F. Hurlburt with having committed perjury in that investigation. Curley was alleged to have informed friends that he had paid for the land of his home by the sale of his interest in the Daly Plumbing Supply Company. Curley later denied he had made such a statement. It is a violation of the law for the Mayor to buy city supplies from a corporation in which he is interested.

The Lomasney order also provides that the letters sent to District Attorney Pelletier by Mr. Hurlburt, who was special counsel of the Finance Commission and who charged that either Curley or Daly was guilty of perjury, be submitted to the House.

The Lomasney order provides that the above be submitted "together with any other testimony or charges against James M. Curley in the office of said commission that the commission may deem material and which has not been printed in the official reports of said commission."

GOES TO ATTORNEY-GENERAL.

"The clerk of the House is hereby directed to submit such material and documents to the Attorney-General, who is requested, upon examination of such reports, to take such action as in his opinion the public interest may require."

ONE MAN COULD END STRIKE AT AMOSKEAG

By CHARLES O. POWER.

Manchester N. H., June 13.—This is the eighteenth week of the big mill strike in this city. And still no sign of a break on either side.

For seventeen weeks the great Amoskeag mills have been non-productive, and more than 16,000 textile workers, providers for at least an equal number of dependents, have not earned a cent.

The average payroll has been about $350,000 a week, so that, for the period of the strike that has passed, nearly $6,000,000 in lost

Coast guard stations near New Rochelle have been asked to search for the boat and the men. All are skilful navigators.

ORDER TO INVESTIGATE MAYOR'S FIRST TERM PASSED BY HOUSE

Martin M. Lomasney, termed by Mayor Curley the "old man," resumed his warfare on Boston's Mayor in the House of Representatives today and after a bitter attack upon the man he once supported, urged the House of Representatives to adopt his order that evidence against Mayor Curley procured by the Finance Commission during the first Curley administration be turned over to Attorney-General J. Weston Allen.

The vote in the House was 121 to 66.

It means that the Attorney-General will now review the commission's evidence of alleged graft and scandal and decide whether Mayor Curley will be prosecuted.

Voters Passed on Charges, Says Mayor Curley

Pressed for a statement, Mayor Curley said:

"Every problem contained in the Lomasney order was considered and passed upon was elected.

"It is unfortunate he cannot appreciate the fact that the city held an election last December and that Curley was was elected.

"I am extremely busy transacting affairs of the city, and I find it impossible to devote any time to other than city business."

The Mayor added that he did not propose to make a controversy of the matter.

BLAMES CAPITAL AND LABOR FOR COAL WASTE

New York, June 13.—The nation's coal bill includes too much unemployment and too little productive work, representing wastefulness of both capital and labor, George Otis Smith, director of the United States Geological Survey, declared today, at the meeting of the public committee on coal.

"The coal miner cannot be put in a privileged class anymore than the so-called coal operator," he said. "The world owes the coal miner a living only as he earns it, but he certainly should have a better chance to earn it—a longer year and a longer day."

GOING THROUGH WITH IT

The Maine judge who convicted Adam and Eve (Butter), of breaking game laws believed that the young couple are doing a courageous thing—to wrest a living from the wilderness with only their bare hands. Read their story and see their pictures every day in the Daily Advertiser.—Advt.

To Martin Lomasney, waging his far almost singlehanded is meant a victory against the foe he so bitterly attacked with blistering rhetoric on the same House floor a month ago.

It means that dragged into public light may be the alleged swanboat lease graft in the Public Garden, the bonding scandal, alleged theft of public funds, the purchase of the site for Mayor Curley's Jamaica Way mansion, the alleged monopoly in passing out insurance on city property, refreshment privilege to relatives of Mark Angell, swanboat lessee and other matters.

Today Mr. Lomasney walked the House floor and thundered his opinions to legislators. With clenched fists he thumped home his points.

CALLS CURLEY TRAITOR.

Mayor Curley he branded a traitor to his race, the Simon Legree of politics and accused him of fraud and corruption.

"He has always been a traitor to my race," he stormed.

Lomasney's victory was a double one. Not only did he succeed in opening up the graft scandal linked with Mayor Curley's first administration and forcing the matter up to the Attorney-General for investigation, but he defeated members of the Rules Committee, who refused to recommend his order for passage, after he charged they had decided to admit it with an order for the appointment of a committee to investigate the City Charter.

Various Representatives made bitter speeches in attempts to quash the order. Lomasney was charged with bringing a personal political fight into the House and with failure to act long ago if what he charged he knew to be true. Fast as speakers were mowed down by the automatic rule limiting debate, the West End boss, once a political power of unknown strength, was on his feet and fighting for the passage of his order. The vote came with surprising suddenness.

HOUSE ORDERS AN INVESTIGATION OF CURLEY'S FIRST TERM

ROLL CALL VOTE.

It was put to a motion, acted upon and a rollcall vote taken. This took about seven minutes to consummate. The House was breathless as it was taken.

Reading from the report of the finance committee's investigation of the city's bonding business, Lomasney said:

"This investigation was instituted by the Finance Committee, with Mr. Henry F. Hurlburt as its counsel, to determine whether Mayor Curley had robbed the city of Boston and was guilty of perjury. The evidence was sent to then District Attorney Pelletier. He refused to prosecute. Then Hurlburt, one of the greatest lawyers in this country, sent a letter to Pelletier in which he said:

QUOTES HURLBURT.

"'Before presenting this evidence to you I gave it study and thought and it seemed to me clear that the crime of perjury was committed by Mr. Curley and Mr. Daly, that there was cause for an indictment and that a trial before a jury would result in a conviction.'"

Pointing to five volumes of evidence on his desk Mr. Lomasney said:

"This was done by a former Mayor. These investigations were not made by Tom, Dick or Harry, but by a commission appointed by the Governor to keep the city on an even keel and to prevent fraud.

"Yet the action to turn this evidence over to the Attorney-General has been dormant, while the members of the rules committee sneered at me."

SAYS ORDER IS NECESSARY.

"What is proposed? Such action as th Attorney-General thinks proper. He cannot do this without this order. They would say he is playing politics.

"Mayor Curley attacks the Governor and this body on the Elevated matter—he is apt to have any one of you called before the Grand Jury any day—but is he to be allowed to go scot free as the result of the diplomacy of Representative McCormack, who controls the committee?"

"McCormack and Hayes, both members of the Rules Committee, held back the order until the end of the legislative session and then gave the report to Hull and said: 'Let him run it into Martin.'

CALLS IT POLITICS.

"The case is before the House based upon official reports. Pass the order and it will check up the men in high public office. It will make the House stand for honest government in Boston. It will make the city a jewel, the best governed city in the country with the Mayor working, not talking and loating the city."

Representative John C. Hull of Leominster, Republican floor leader of the House then spoke. He said: "This matter ought never to have been brought before the House. The reports of the Finance Commission are all in print and are available for anyone who wants to read them. Why doesn't Lomasney go to the district attorney himself? He has been a member of this House for the last two or three years. Why didn't he bring it in before? Why did he wait until the Mayor made a speech somewhere and then bring in his order the very next day? This is a political battle between two men and the House of Representatives should not decide it for them."

Representative Roland D. Sawyer of Ware, one of the three Democrats on the Rules Committee, said:

"This Legislature is the oldest legislative body with one exception in the world, and it is a question whether we are going to progress with dignity or become the tail of the Boston political kite. There is no precedent for this order. The mayor of Boston is not a State official. He has done nothing to bring himself into contempt before this House. If he is as guilty as Lomasney would have us believe, certainly Henry F. Hurlburt, who dug up the mess for the Attorney-General to proceed against Tufts, would not hesitate to advise the Attorney-General to act against Curley.

SEES WEAPON FOR CURLEY.

"There is no political advantage to be gained by the Republican party. If the order is not adopted Curley will say it is a victory. If it is adopted Curley will say he is being persecuted. Curley is a powerful speaker before any crowd. He will say: 'I tried to fulfill my campaign pledges, but they refused, and passed an order against me for things I was required to have done nine years ago. They can't frighten me off, I will continue to fight your fight.' You will make the biggest man politically in the State."

Representative Stephen C. Sullivan of East Boston:

"I hope the Republican party which controls this House is too good, too great and too grand to stoop to fight in the Democratic gutters of Boston."

Representative Elijah Adlow of Roxbury:

"We have the right to impugn the credibility of the man who has attacked this Legislature and who has characterized the members as crooks. The man who destroys confidence in the representative form of government is as bad as the anarchist. Curley is an inhuman public servant who has no regard for the people of this Commonwealth or the representatives they have chosen."

Representative William I. Hennessey of Dorchester:

REFUSES TO YIELD.

Adlow jumped to his feet to protest, but Hennessey refused to yield the floor. Hennessey continued:

"Lomasney supported Curley in his first fight. Let Lomasney remember 'He who steals my purse steals trash, but he who steals my good name steals that which not enriches him but makes me poor indeed.' Lomasney was a supporter of Pelletier and had one of his men in Pelletier's office. He is a supporter of the new district attorney and has one of his men in his office."

Hennessey's speech was cut short by the rule which limits debate. Lomasney again took the floor.

He first read the report of Mayor Curley's speech at the Knights of Columbus dinner to Monsignor Splaine where Curley said Governor Cox was the manikin of Charles H. Innes and that Lomasney ought to be driven out of Boston.

SAYS CURLEY SOLD RACE.

"Curley struck the first blow," said Lomasney. "He that draws the sword shall perish by it. This Rules Committee gave me no proper consideration, but they gave all the time that was necessary to Curley who called them crooks. Curley says he is fighting for 'my race.' Curley always sold out the race. He said he would never vote for a president who would support the League of Nations and a few days later he was on the platform for Cox. He took money in New Hampshire for speaking against the League of Nations and then went back there and talked for it.

"Pass this order and Curley will be kept in his place."

The vote then was followed, and the order was adopted.

"One of the most prominent men on the Committee on Rules," Lomasney said, "was talking with me about this order the other day, and I said to him: 'Did you read Mr. Hurlburt's letter?' and he said 'No.' They feel secure in their power, that they could suppress everything. Because Mayor Curley attacked the Governor and attacks you and the members of this House and says you must go down before the Grand Jury, are you going to be sidetracked by the diplomacy of the gentleman from South Boston (Representative McCormack), who has controlled the Committee on Rules?

APPEALED TO ATTWILL.

Lomasney after reciting the unsuccessful attempt of Hurlburt to prevail upon Pelletier to prosecute Curley and Daly for alleged perjuries continued:

"They went back to Attorney General Attwill, and he said that in view of the fact that Mr. Pelletier refused to proceed, he should not prosecute. There was th law of this Commonwealth being stopped. Where was law and order? There was the Mayor sworn to do his duty and committing perjury. Is perjury no serious crime? Is it not a felony and the most serious kind of a felony?

"Stand by the dignity of the city that gave him birth and by the race from which he sprung—forgiving and generous to a fault, honest and indefatigious and true. From the day he took office he has been telling Senator Lodge, 'You must do as I tell you.' He has been telling the president of the Senate, he has been telling you, sir, the Speaker of this House, what you should do. The purpose of this order was that there would be sometime, somewhere among the 240 men in this House, one man who would take him to task.

DENIES PARTISAN MOVE.

"I am a vicious partisan, until I come inside these doors, but when I take my oath of office to support the Constitution, I go through and partisanship goes out the window. I appeal to this House not to be swayed by partisanship today. You have been here for two years, and you can decide whether I have been honest in my endeavor to give the best that is in me, to give the best services that I can to the city that gave me birth.

"As a boy I sat in the gallery of this House, never dreaming that some day I would be here in this chamber. Here we have this man telling this Legislature what it must do. 'You cannot adjourn,' he says, 'until you get my permission.' This Simon Legree attempts to dictate to this body. Why, the biggest man in Massachusetts would have enough to do to stay in the Mayor's office every day from 9 to 5.

"The Committee on Rules and its skilfull engineer, the gentleman from South Boston, how skilfully they steered this ship. The gentleman from Brighton (Hayes) was not in the room when the vote was taken. They did not go and tell him," he said. 'We will use the chairman of the judiciary committee, the leader of the House (Hull), and let him throw it into Martin; let him roll Martin over.'

RESULT OF HEARING.

"The committee said: 'Who will stick the knife into him first?' Well, Mr. Speaker, I hope you will remember what 'Veritas' stands for. I come from a class of people who know the value of their word when they give it. When you give it, stick to it and don't give it until you know you are right.

"The evidence is collected by a State board. It is not talk, but the result of hearings. This charge is the charge of the head of the Bar Association—not a graduate of Harvard, but of the College of Hard Knocks.

"It does not cost a dollar to transmit this matter to the Attorney-General. It does not require anything but you gentlemen to vote for it. It will do no harm, it will check up these men with power and make them realize that no man, no matter who he may be in public office, is greater than the law of this Comonwealth.

"HATES COWARDICE."

"Look at the difference which the committee paid to former Representative Jordan. Look at the cotton batting you put around him. You allowed him to attack the judiciary of the State. I am no saint, but I hate cowardice. Stand on your dignity and make Boston the best governed city in the nation. Send this matter to the Attorney-General and you will have the best governed city in the country, because mayors will case loafing for 'Pop' years and talking for four years, and loting the treasury."

Representative John W. McCormack, Mayor Curley's spokesman, said:

"I deny that their statements show the sentiment of the race from which they both sprung. It was a great mistake to have introduced the order. It seems to show that the race is fighting among its members. Lomasney has a right to go to the Attorney General or the District Attorney.

AN AFFRONT TO MANY.

"The adoption of this order will be regarded as a personal affront to a substantial number of the people of the State. This is a fight between two men, both big, both capable of doing much for the benefit of the whole State, to make Boston bigger, better and busiher.

McCORMICK IS CALLED IN 'L' JURY PROBE

It would carry you back to the old days of "the hundreds," when England's harassed population was divided into groups of a hundred each. When a dead body was found and the guilty man not produced, the "hundred" of that neighborhood were fined heavily—sometimes causing innocent men to be denounced and executed to avoid fines.

Under the anti-lynching bill the national government would fine $10,000 any county disgraced by a lynching if the guilty were not found and punished.

To "charge" cash for a lynching seems primitive. Some better remedy must exist than the old way of stoning for killing by paying the offended party.

MRS. DOWNES TO SUE WOMAN HOOTCH SLEUTH FOR DAMAGES

ACADEMY RUM WAR WARMER

Principal Coates of Bradford Also Incensed Against Miss Durfee

The fat's in the fire at Haverhill! With staid New England's exclusive girl's academy for a background, a "moist plot" and three prominent women co-starring, the comedy-drama which has grown out of the liquor raid upon the home of Herbert W. ownes, opposite Bradford Academy, said to have been an oasis for certain fair students, promises to gather action.

Mrs. Downes today announced that she is "going all the way through" in a suit for damages against Catherine Durfee, whose alleged purchase of liquor at the Downes home preceded the raid.

Thoroughly incensed over the scandal which has enveloped herself and her husband, the latter local supervisor of music in the public schools and organist in St. Stephen's Episcopal Church in Boston, Mrs. Downes insists that she will leave no stone unturned in her fight against Catherine Durfee, ex-Bradford graduate and hootch sleuth for one night. Said to have joined her is Miss Marion Coates, principal of the school, who also seeks vindication from the charge that her pupils suffered from extreme dryness.

NO JOINING THERE.

But says Miss Coates: "Join forces with Mrs. Downes—I? Certainly not! A newspaper report that I would take legal action against Miss Durfee is not true. Not with Mrs. Downes—oh, no, indeed!

But there's one thing no one can be mistaken about. That's Mrs. Downes' attitude toward Miss Durfee who, in behalf of the "good name of my alma mater," as she explained, purchased one flask of perfectly good hootch from Mrs. Downes for $2 and brought her purchase straight to Prohibition Agent James F. Roberts.

"SHE'S NOT THROUGH."

"Are YOU Catherine Durfee?" demanded Mrs. Downes as the reporter encountered her outside the spacious grounds of Bradford Academy.

"You're lucky," was the thoughtful answer.

"I'm going my way to my attorneys, right now, and we shall see what we shall see.

"Catherine Durfee says she has sworn affidavits from girl students at Bradford Academy who have purchased liquor from me. Has she? Well, she'd better get ready to produce them, then. I'm quite ready to call her little bluff.

"That talk about the girls, too! There isn't a girl in the academy that I know that won't line up with me when there's a showdown called on this thing. It's an insult to them, too. There isn't a finer group of girls in the world than those at Bradford and they're all my friends. Sell liquor to them! We shall see."

Cars Which Save In Price and Upkeep

A favorite phrase in current use is, "It is not the original expense, it is the upkeep which costs."

But there are cars which prove this untrue — cars which reduce the upkeep to a minimum, and they are to be found among the used automobiles advertised for sale in The American's "Automobile Exchange."

Look through these columns. Here you will find a splendid variety of cars that have been used, sometimes only slightly, which represent a substantial saving in price, and in the ardent necessary to keep them going.

You can own one of these cars if you will only think so. Look them over very day. Get the facts about them and when you make your decision you will not regret it.

Circus Artist Gives Flapper Real Thrill; Barely Dodges Death

Big Wind Does Things to the Tent and Raises the Author's Bobbed Hair

BY THE FLAPPER.

Cliko, Cliko, the wild man—cap'chahed on the banks of the Ganges rivah; step a little closer, ladies an' gents—notice his tusks—peanuts, peanuts, buy your girl a bag of peanuts, have a good time, now you're here—I awsk you to give your attention to Mrs. Doll—this little lady is pos-i-tive-ly the smallest midget on any stage—she dances, she dances; oh, how she dances; you've all seen your mother making jelly in the kitchen—

LET ALL ATTENTION BE UPON THE CENTRE RING!

That's supposed to be opening of the Ringling Brothers' Circus out Huntington avenue—does it sound like it? I was there yesterday, but I wasn't the only flapper on the grounds. Even the canvas flapped. So much so that there was great wailing and gnashing of teeth on the lot. For the wind is the circusus' greatest enemy.

JOHNNIE, BLOWN ALONG.

"Johnnie," she screamed, "Johnnie, you worm, c'mere an' hold the tent up."

Johnnie hurried over, blown along by the gale, but too late. Lillian's dressing table, with its jars of grease-paint, face-calcimine and eyebrow polish had tumbled over in a mess on her dainty bed.

"I don't like this," worried Miss Leitzel. Yesterday the storm pooled holes in the Big Top. The way it is I'll get quite a breeze up on the trapeze. You're no idea how trying that can be—when you're flying through the air for a pair of swinging rings and the wind blows them out of reach."

"I can't think of anything off-hand that would make me nervouser than that," I sympathized. "Do you hafta go up in a cyclone like this?"

"I'd go up today if the earth was quaking," she said. "This is Boston, in Pittsfield I couldn't go up and the people asked for their money back. What would Boston say?"

TRAPEZE TOO LOW.

"Mike!" she called to a uniformed man who was tugging at the guide ropes in the centre ring. "You've got me about ten or fifteen feet too low. I like him."

The white-haired prop man came over to Lillian. He shouted above the roaring of the wind. Also above the cussing of a crew of men who were trying to make the circus poles stay up.

"Will I had my way, Miss Lillian, you'd never go up today," he hollered solemnly. "Look at how slack she is. An' if I tighten the guide ropes they'll snap in this wind. Better not go up."

"Pass the trapeze, Mike," the star insisted. "I'm going up an' if I spill I'd just as lief fall eighty feet as fifty."

CRACKED BOTH KNEES.

"Once I fell on just such a day, an' cracked both knees.

"And when we played Buffalo I got rheumatism going under the bills in the Maid of the Mist and couldn't walk for a week—much less flop around in the air. Today'll be my first up since then."

One of the girls told me to sit down on a closed trunk and take a load off my feet.

"You have a lot of washer in this town," she opened in conversation. "But I like it. Don't let me do all the talkin. I'm a strong an' worker and we get used to workin' our jaws an' don't know when to stop."

"How does anyone get to be a strong-jaw artist?" I asked her.

BROKE FOUR TEETH.

"I don't know," she said. "All I know is I got a diploma to be a graduate nurse, and here I am. I broke four teeth learin'. But I like it."

"Aren't you afraid of the wind?" I asked her.

"I would be," she confessed. "Only in the trapeze act I play to my husband. And he never misses me!"

"Mightn't he miss you some day after you've had a scrap?"

"Nope," answered Mrs. Charlotte Shived. "Couples who hate each other have to work together on the trapeze. There was one couple last year settin' a divorce—but it never made any difference in their work. Anyhow, Frank an' I never scrap. I met him in the circus four years ago—met him up in the air. After we'd worked together a few nights he started wooing me in the air. I told him I wouldn't marry him because of my career.

"He caught me in mid-air. He was hanging head-down by his knees, an' I had hold of his wrists. We were swinging back an' forth.

"'Say, my fair Belinda,' he hissed.' Marry me or I'll drop you. What do you say? Tomorrow?'

"'What could I do?' wailed Charlotte. "I had to marry the wretch. But I like him."

ORDERS NET AWAY.

Back in the Big Top the spotlight was fixed on the centre stage. The band had stopped playing. The prop man stood about in a tense circle. Inside the circle was a little white figure in tights. She was shaking her head, vigorously and, reaching for the rope that carries her up to her trapeze.

Up, up she went, hand over hand. High up on the rope she hung for a second, head down. Then she jumped at caught the rings. She started to swing.

A group of men came running with a net. With quick movements they fixed it beneath the little white figure. They looked up anxiously as she hung by her thumbs.

Then they saw her stop swinging and motion to them with an imperious little gesture. She was ordering the net away! They had only arrived to bring it after she was up—Lillian Leitzel does not play with a net!

A few seconds after the net was dropped the heavy pole near the centre of the tent was torn up from the ground and swung along by the wind. Lillian's guide ropes were fastened to the uprooted pole.

SLIDES DOWN ROPE.

In a split second Lillian had slid down the rope and was taking a graceful bow. The band had not stopped playing.

Nobody seemed to know that the star had finished her aerial act before the end.

"Well," she said, smiling weakly, "I would join a circus!"

OUIJA SOLVES PROBLEM OF MISSING GIRL

Bessie Melvina Furbush, sixteen years old, missing since Wednesday, is once more with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph W. Furbush. Today she slept. She was making up for lost time. She hadn't had any sleep in three days, she told her rejoicing father and mother, when they brought her home from Haverhill.

There being no fatted calf around to kill, Father Furbush gave Bessie a ruby ring, Mother Furbush gave her a string of pearls and a lot of food, and Bessie hit the hay, and as far as officially known, she is still hitting it.

POLICE WERE CLEWLESS.

Frantic with fear when her daughter failed to return home after several days, and messages to the police of several neighboring cities having failed to get any word of her, Mrs. Furbush yesterday decided to consult Ouija as a last resort.

Laboriously, she spelled out the following message:

The Furbushes, who had previously gone to Lynn, Salem, Portsmouth, and other towns in search of Bessie, immediately prepared to go to Portsmouth to see if Ouija really was right. They were just about to leave their home when they received a message from the Haverhill police, telling them to come and fetch their daughter.

Which they did, and here is the story that Bessie tells:

"After I graduated, last month, from the grammar school, I got a job with the N. D. Dodge Shoe Co. I was temporarily laid off on Wednesday, and was walking home on High street, when an automobile drew up to the curb, and a nice-looking young man at the wheel asked me if I wanted a ride. I did. I got into the car, and we went spinning along.

IT WAS JUST A LARK.

"The young man—I don't know his name, except that his first name is John—was very nice and polite. I had never been out of Newburyport alone in my life, and I thought it'd be a lark.

"I told John that we'd have to be back at 4 o'clock, so I could get supper and help mother and father, and he said he'd see that we were. But when we got to Haverhill his machine broke down. It was quite a predicament, John took me to a house. The people there seemed to know him. He told me to stay there overnight, and said he was going to the hotel and would return to Portsmouth the next day.

"In the morning I took a walk in the town, and I was so sleepy that I could almost fall asleep walking. I was afraid to go to the hotel to inquire about John, so I came to a field where there was a ball game going on. I watched the ball game for a while. It was none sleepier than ever. I guess I must have fallen asleep.

"The next thing I knew, somebody was shaking me by the shoulder. I heard a voice crying, 'Home, you boob, home!' A policeman was looking down at me, and on the ball field some of the players was sliding home.

"So I thought it would be a good thing to slide home, too. The policeman said he'd send for mother and father. Last night, I mean. So here I am—and if you'll excuse me, I'm awfully sleepy."

LENINE'S CONDITION REPORTED HOPELESS

The real cause of his illness is reported to have been a poisoning attempt although it is not clear whether poison was administered in an attempt at assassination.

URGE FRANCE TO TAKE UP DEBT

Paris, June 13 (By International News Service). — M. Jusserand, French ambassador to the United States, has sent a communication to his government urging it to send a debt commission to the United States which was originally designated as the French body which should deal with the American Debt Funding Commission, it was learned this afternoon.

The foregoing cablegram is the first admission that French official circles have begun to feel the pressure of America's demand that the European allied nations make arrangements for the payment of the $10,000,000,000 owing to the United States.

French newspapers only yesterday inaugurated a new campaign in favor of cancellation of war debts.

Chicago, June 13.—The course of France with respect to reparations was defended by Jules J. Jusserand, French Ambassador to the United States, in an address today at University of Chicago commencement.

He denied that France was militaristic, declared France had been more lenient with Germany than the Germans had been with the French in 1870, and asserted the ambitions of France in the Washington conference "were in reality modest."

WITNESSES DEFEND LINCOLN L. REILLY

More than a dozen witnesses took the stand today in behalf of Lincoln L. Reilly, on trial in the Superior Criminal Court, charged with having published false statements regarding "Fam-O," a material used for mixing with gasoline in automobiles.

All testified that they were convinced from trials they had themselves made in their cars that "Fam-O" did what Mr. Reilly claims for it, and that they were satisfied with its performances.

He is alleged to be wanted in New York and Stamford, Ct.

The authorities said she was arrested on information by persons already under arrest in connection with the case, but declined to divulge further information.

SURPRISE AT ARREST.

Mrs. Brunen was escorted from her home in Philadelphia, yesterday afternoon by two men from the office of County Detective Ellis Parker of Burlington County. Her relatives asserted the men said she was wanted in Mount Holly for questioning and were much surprised when she did not return home last night.

They knew nothing of her arrest until today, they said, when her counsel, Walter Keown, got in touch with Parker and learned of her arrest.

Mrs. Brunen's brother, Harry Mohr, and Charles Powell, a former employe of Brunen's circus, are under arrest upon murder charges, Powell is declared by the authorities to have confessed that he did the actual shooting of Brunen at Mohr's request.

Soon after the tragedy a letter, written by Brunen to his sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Jeschke of Chicago, was made public.

The letter emphasized the hitherto not unknown discord that existed in the Brunen household. The circus man denounced his wife in the communication and said: "I think Doty (the wife) is figuring to do away with me."

Brunen wrote the letter on February 20 and it was turned over to George A. Welsh, assistant district attorney, by Mrs. Jeschke.

The showman was found slain in the kitchen of his home in Mount Holly, by some one who first took heads of a shot-gun through a window, near which Brunen sat reading a newspaper.

"There is enough in this letter to warrant swearing out a warrant at once for the arrest of somebody on the charge of conspiracy and murder," said Jonathan Kelsey, prosecutor, at that time.

He received the letter in a carefully sealed envelope from a detective of the District Attorney's office. It became known that Brunen's sister had been questioned three hours.

The disclosure of the letter was a sensational development that followed close upon the funeral of the showman. Mrs. Jeschke, who arrived only five minutes before the services began, greeted the showman's widow affectionately, and she and the widow cried bitterly over the casket and called upon the dead man to speak to them and to tell who had killed him.

WIRE-TAPPING MYSTERY IN WARD PROBE

By International News Service.

White Plains, N. Y., June 13.—Ralph D. Ward, brother of Walter S. Ward, confessed slayer of Clarence Peters of Haverhill, Mass., was the first witness when the Grand Jury met today.

It was expected he would testify regarding Walter S. Ward's story he had paid large sums of money to a gang of alleged blackmailers, part of which money the confessed slayer is said to have obtained from his brother and his father, George S. Ward.

It was learned an attempt had been made to tap the wires in the room housing the telephone switchboard into which all lines connecting with county offices converge.

George W. Sutton, New Rochelle tax commissioner, testified regarding the alleged poker party at the Ward home, May 15, it was learned. Sutton said there were no disturbances and when he left at 1 o'clock there was no one else there but members of the Ward household.

The police yesterday raided three tailor shops, Goodman Brothers, Pemberton square; Blackstone Tailoring Company, No. 89 Court street, and the R. E. Splaine & Co., Washington street.

SUPPOSE a certain low form of animal brought forth a single offspring once an hour, and that the offspring reproduced at the same rate as the parent, starting as soon as it was one hour old, how long would it take to get four in the fourth generation, i. e., four great grandchildren of the parent?

EDISON'S QUERY ON SALESMAN STIRS 'EM UP

You can never tell what a woman will do under any given circumstances.

That much the Edison Questions Editor has found out from the first batch of Answers that have come in to the three questions included in Thomas A. Edison's questionnaire to prospective employes. The American is offering a prize of $10 to the person sending in the best answers to the three questions.

Question No. 2 was:

You are a salesman making every effort to get an order from a big manufacturer who is married to an unusually jealous wife. One evening you see this prospective customer dining in a restaurant with a chorus girl. What would you do?

Adam Comes Mrs. Shirley Bellar, No. 373 Washington street, Boston, and says:

"MIND OWN BUSINESS."

"If I were a salesman, I'd go up to the manufacturer and make my presence known. But as I am a woman, my natural instinct would be to let his wife know what I had seen."

On the other hand, Mawruss, Vennette V. Brody, No. 475 Geneva avenue, Dorchester, takes this stand:

"In answer to Question No 2, as to what I would do—I'd mind my own business, that's what I'd do!"

Miss B. Stern, No. 53 Poplar street, Boston, writes:

"You have but to let this manufacturer see that you're watching him, and you need have no fear of getting that order, because he'd gladly give any thing to keep your mouth shut to his wife."

Among the men who answered Question No. 2, it seems to be generally admitted that taking advantage of the manufacturer's philandering to get an order would be rather a mean sort of blackmail.

MORE THAN HALF.

Yet more than half of those who replied in the first batch of letters received by the editor seem to be perfectly willing to take advantage of this form of blackmail:

Among those who answered that they would take advantage of what they saw in the restaurant are Edward B. Berry, Huntington avenue and Gainsborough street, Boston; Charles Taylor, No. 187 Dudley street, Roxbury; Fred Fray, No. 786 Main street, Willimantic, Ct.; Peter J. Curran, No. 57 P street, South Boston; A. M. Nadell, No. 27 Glenville avenue, Allston; Mrs. Kenny, No. 70 Hampshire street, Roxbury; Anthony Farschio, Providence; Charles T. Hart, No. 19 Sacramento, Cambridge; George F. Dodge, No. 104 Eutaw street, East Boston.

Those who stated they would refuse to take advantage of the situation to make a sale are:

NO TWO AGREE.

The answers to the poker problem embodied in Question No. 1, were as varied as the movements of players would be in an actual game involving the same situation. No two persons seemed to agree on whether to drop out, stay or raise, but a good many offered excellent answers by saying that they didn't play poker.

The third question, a biological one, brought answers almost as varied. Most of the answers seemed to favor four hours as the period in which the low form of animal would propagate four great-grandchildren, at the rate of a single offspring once an hour. One correspondent characterizes the question as a riddle, and another states that the matter is an impossibility.

P.S. As we go to press a letter is received from E. A. B., Westminster Hotel, Boston, which indignantly wishes to know why Mr. Edison picked a chorus girl as an improper person to be seen dining in a restaurant with a manufacturer. B.A.E. says:

SUCCESSOR TO GHANDI IS ARRESTED

Lucknow, British India, June 13.—Quereshi, who succeeded Mohandas Gandhi as editor of Young India, has been arrested following the publication of alleged seditious articles in the newspaper.

The Central Kalifhat Committee has adopted a resolution declaring civil disobedience unavoidable "in view of the hostile attitude of the British Cabinet towards the Kalifhat question and the continuous repressive policy of the government in India."

The committee, however, endorses the resolution of the recent all-India Congress postponing aggressive measures until August 15. Meanwhile a sub-committee has been appointed to co-operate with the Congress sub-committee which is touring India gathering data concerning the advisability of again starting civil disobedience.

The raid was made at the instance of officials of the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

The birds were taken to the Framingham headquarters of the State constabulary, where they were carefully guarded to prevent another free fight and slaughter like that at Springfield some time ago, following a similar raid.

Jones admits that he formerly owned the birds, but says that a valid bill of sale was executed for them on May 23 to William Laughlin. Laughlin corroborated this statement and said he would try to regain his property.

65 GAMECOCKS SEIZED IN RAID

Millbury, June 13.—Sixty-five gamecocks were seized by Deputy Sheriff G. A. Keith and Chief of Police T. A. Nolan in a raid on the old "spot house" on Riverlin street.

SANBORN AND HIS WIFE HAVE SEPARATED

Friends of "Jack" Sanborn, son of Oren C. Sanborn, multimillionaire "coffee king" of Boston, and the former Eleanor Montgomery, were amazed by a report that the young bridal couple, whose marriage last March was one of the big social events of the season, had separated after less than three months of married life.

The younger Mr. Sanborn has gone back to the home of his mother, on the $1,000,000 family estate at Algrengat in Winchester, while his bride is reported to be in seclusion.

Mr. Sanborn and his mother both refused to deny or admit the report of a separation, but John F. Feeney, attorney for the young man, confirmed the rumor of marital troubles between the young people. He would not say, however, whether Mr. Sanborn, who is only twenty years old, would seek a divorce.

After their fashionable wedding last March, Mr. and Mrs. Sanborn went to Florida for their honeymoon, and on their return occupied a suite at the Hotel Buckminster, where Mrs. Sanborn had lived with her Uncle Robert prior to her wedding.

Dr. Edward Montgomery declined to discuss the matter, and Mrs. Montgomery, who lives at the Hotel Puritan, also refused to talk about the report of a quarrel between her daughter and her son-in-law.

"Eleanor has gone away," Mrs. Montgomery is quoted as having said, "and it will be useless for anyone to try to find her."

LLOYD GEORGE "RUNNING COUNTRY INTO WAR"

London, June 13 (By International News Service).—"Premier Lloyd George is running this country straight into war again," declared the Morning Post, a Tory organ, in attacking the British policy on Ireland and Russia. The Morning Post appealed for funds for a Tory "dirdard" campaign to defeat the Liberals in the next election.

The Morning Post hopes to set up a Unionist or Tory government.

Says He to Bryan: Did Your Ape's Tail Go Before or After?

Morgantown, W. Va., June 13.—Dr. R. C. Spangler, professor of biology in West Virginia University, who recently received from William J. Bryan a letter in which Mr. Bryan asked the biologist "From what age did you descend?" sent a reply today.

"I assure you," he wrote in closing his reply, "that your embryological development was the same, except for this one point—I cannot say, I do not know, whether your tail degenerated before birth or was amputated after birth."

2 OUT OF 25 AT VASSAR HAVE BOBBED HAIR

Poughkeepsie, June 13.—When twenty-five sophomores marched down the green sward at Vassar College carrying the historic daisy chain, it was discovered that only two had bobbed hair.

Seeing these students it looked forward to with more eagerness than any other event of commencement time, for they are not chosen for athletic or intellectual ability, but for the same reason that Paris picked Helen—beauty.

Among the twenty-five girls who carried the ponderous chain of daisies were: Gladys Duffy of Worcester, Catherine Gettamy of Dorchester and Eunice Harriman of Newton.

FEARS LOSS OF FORTUNE BY BETROTHAL

Miss Rose M. Tonley, South Boston star, wants the fact that she has taken out marriage intentions to wed Herbert H. Johnson of No. 131 O street kept a profound secret.

More than that, she declared that if the report of her wedding plans gets abroad she will cancel the intentions and there'll be no wedding.

"It means a whole lot to Herbert and to me to have this thing kept quiet—it means the loss of a legacy if the news becomes known, and I shall not permit him to lose anything through me," said the young woman.

The young people have kept their engagement and plans for their wedding a close secret even from their own families. Miss Tonley's family knew nothing about it. Even her sister, Madeline, in confidant was in ignorance of Rose's plans.

Mr. Johnson, who is twenty-two years old, gave his occupation as meat cutter. Miss Tonley is nineteen and lives with her parents at No. 161 East Eighth street, South Boston.

She began winning swimming trophies when she was only eleven years old, and has been active in water sports ever since. She was a prominent figure in a number of the Boston American's swimming contests.

PAPPAS CALM ON DAY AFTER MURDER

Paul Pappas, on trial for his life in connection with the murder of Mrs. Alice Arsenault, was cool and collected the day after Christmas, 1920, when Mrs. Arsenault is believed to have been murdered.

This was the testimony given by Mrs. Clara Stimpson of No. 675 Tremont street, who formerly lived at the lodging house kept by Mrs. Arsenault, at No. 517 Columbus avenue, when the trial of the accused man reopened today in the Superior Criminal Court.

Mrs. Stimpson said she talked with Pappas the day after Christmas and that he had told her Mrs. Arsenault had gone to Canada to nurse a sick sister.

James M. Stewart, a real estate dealer, told of having drawn a bill of sale for the furnishings of the lodging house when Pappas sold them to Miss Theresa Saulnier. Pappas was exceedingly nervous when the bill was signed, Mr. Stewart testified, and explained that his business was "wrong."

This witness said that he had warned Mrs. Soulnier against dealing with Pappas.

At the time of the killing Kokos and his wife, Mrs. Lena Kokos, were living in the rooming house conducted by Mrs. Arsenault.

Kokos' testimony indicated it was generally believed among the people of the lodging house and neighborhood that Pappas and Mrs. Arsenault were on exceedingly friendly terms.

Kokos said on Christmas Day Mrs. Arsenault and Pappas had been drinking. He added that late in the evening Mrs. Arsenault visited Mrs. Kokos and the two women played dominoes for a while before Mrs. Arsenault went to her rooms.

That Kokos said, was the last time he saw Mrs. Arsenault alive. Later, he said, he met Pappas, who told him he had seen Mrs. Arsenault in Scollay Square. On another occasion he told Kokos, the witness testified, that "Alice has left me for a rich man."

LONESOME PINE ASKS DIVORCE; NAMES SPIRITS

Worcester, June 13.—Whenever Antonio Pine arrived home from a hard day's work expecting a hearty meal he found the table bare and his wife communing with the spirits.

Now Pine seeks a divorce. He says his wife's interest in spirits and things supernatural so disturbed him he failed in health. In his divorce libel he alleged cruel and abusive treatment.

At a hearing in Probate Court no evidence was given to show abusive acts by Mrs. Pine, so Pine's attorney, Frank P. Ryan, was requested to submit a brief citing cases where a divorce was granted on evidence where ill health caused by alleged incompatibility was alleged.

"I will cite at least one case showing such," said Attorney Ryan today. He added that Mrs. Pine's interest in the spirit world had ruined Mr. Pine's health. "Such action is cruel treatment," he said.

LOSSES TRACED IN MONEY PLANT

Washington, June 13.—Investigation at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing has disclosed evidences of losses, but not in large amounts, Secretary of the Treasury Mellon today was informed by a committee of special inquiry.

A supplemental statement will be prepared by Director Hill of the bureau, setting forth the losses over stated periods since the beginning of the war.

The investigation has involved accounting and taking stock of supplies for the period since 1917. The magnitude of the job has caused delay. On the basis of the findings Secretary Mellon is convinced no serious wrong-doing has been revealed. The losses have been largely the result of faulty devices used for numbering bonds and other securities. No thefts of serious nature have been uncovered, officials maintained.

Mrs. Lillian Rubin of No. 18 Hubbard street, Malden, the mother of five children, is under arrest on a secret warrant charging her with receiving property stolen from the Boston & Main railroad.

She entered a plea of not guilty and is held for trial in $5,000 bail.

Among the youngsters who are made temporarily motherless by her arrest are Celia, Morris and Bennie, all under ten years of age.

Mrs. Rubin's husband recently was arrested in connection with the case.

$5,000 ALIMONY LOST TO WIFE OF McADOO'S SON

New York, June 13.—Armour Ferguson was relieved from paying $5,000 a year alimony to his former wife, Mrs. Molly Tackaberry Ferguson, now the wife of William G. McAdoo, Jr. Mr. Ferguson paid $10,300 counsel fees and expenses in connection with the divorce, which was issued last December.

In a decision signed by Supreme Court Justice Wasservogel, the decree of Mrs. McAdoo from Ferguson, which became final March 7 last, was amended so as to drop the paragraph providing for payment of alimony.

The former Molly Tackaberry married Mr. McAdoo May 23 last.

AMERICAN IS UNDER ARREST IN IRELAND

Belfast, June 12 (By International News Service).—Londonderry today is facing famine as the result of the cutting off of the usual lines of food supplies for the city.

Supplies are being sent there from Glasgow, but these are insufficient.

Incendiaries were again active in Belfast and a large factory was destroyed by fire.

Belfast, June 12.—James Devlin, a middle-aged Irish-American, arrived in Londonderry Sunday morning from New York.

As he was motoring to his native town, Buncrana, in North Donegal, in the evening, he was held up and searched at the border by special constables who reported that they found an unloaded revolver and some documents in his possession. Devlin was arrested.

Irish Navy to Be Recruited at Once

By DENIS O'CONNELL.

Dublin, June 13.—Within a few weeks another flag will appear upon the high seas—the flag of the Irish Free State.

Recruiting for the Irish navy will begin Friday. Irishmen who served in the British navy during the war and who joined the Irish Republican army when demolished will form the nucleus.

At the present time there is not a boat at the disposal of the Free State, but under the treaty Great Britain will hand over certain boats for coast fishery protection.

Ask Oath Only From Free State Parliament

By DAVID M. CHURCH.
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

London, June 13.—Great Britain does not require an oath of allegiance from the members of the Provisional Parliament in the Irish Free State. But it does ask for such an oath from members of the Irish Free State Parliament after the adoption of the proposed Irish Constitution, Colonial Secretary Winston Churchill said in the House of Commons this afternoon.

Secretary Churchill declared, however, that Great Britain does require adherence to the Anglo-Irish peace treaty from the members of the Provisional Government, now in existence in Dublin.

This statement explained the oath issue which has been little understood by the public and has been the subject of much speculation in the press.

Lloyd George to Confer With Poincare

London, June 13 (By International News Service).—Premier Lloyd George will meet Premier Poincare of France when the latter visits England for the Verdun Day ceremonies at the end of this week and will endeavor to smooth out the latest difficulties between the two countries. Whitehall is withholding comment on the latest French note, but there is a strong belief the obstructionist attitude of France will shorten The Hague conference.

The French note insisted the Allies should serve an ultimatum on Russia demanding restoration of seized property, recognition of private property rights, recognition of the imperial debt and other guarantees.

'POLICE STRIKE PROVED ARMY NEED'--WEEKS

By Associated Press

West Point, N. Y., June 12.—Assertions that the United States does not need an army were met by Secretary Weeks of the War Department in an address at the graduating exercises of the United States Military Academy today with the statement that "the civilization of the world rests on no surer foundation than did the civilization of Boston" at the time of the police strike.

"If it were not for the restraining force of the military establishments of the nations of the world," the secretary declared, "an indescribable state of chaos would result and civilization would be rapidly exterminated through self-destruction."

Referring to the "passions" to which "the criminal and lowest elements of the city gave free reign," once the policemen of Boston left their posts, he said: "It has been demonstrated beyond any question of doubt that there is an organized underworld and a criminal element against which society must protect itself and which is ready to begin its depredations on society the moment society is unable to protect itself."

To say that the United States does not need an army, Mr. Weeks added, is just as reasonable as to say that "Boston and our other large cities do not need a police force."

The question of the size of the army, the Secretary declared, would always be a matter of controversy, especially as after a great war there is "an alarming tendency for the overburdened taxpayer to forget the lessons of the past and cancel his insurance, trusting to luck for at least a few years without the national protection which those more familiar with military matters and requirements deem necessary."

There is no question, he added, or difference of opinion as to its quality.

"Let it be said by the citizens of the Republic that the officers of our army are our examples and protectors, that we can depend on their honesty, their uprightedness of character, their ability to serve the nation and, if need be, their willingness to die for it."

SURPRISES PLANNED AT B. U. BANQUET TONIGHT

For the last time the senior class of the College of Liberal Arts of Boston University will be together at their final banquet to be held at the Hotel Vendome tonight. Miss Anna Fulton of Somerville will give the class prophecy, which has aroused much enthusiasm among the seniors.

The big surprise of the evening is still "under cover" lest the faculty taboo it.

The surprise will be kept a secret until the last minute.

Many engagements are expected to be announced tonight.

MIXUP OVER A BILL, SO POLICE TAKE HAND

Adolphus Harding and Janie Hamilton of Roxbury, both colored, pleaded not guilty to a charge of mutual assault in Roxbury Court today.

Janie had attempted to collect money due her from Adolphus, she said. Bottles were thrown, harsh words exchanged and it looked as though Janie would collect when the police appeared. The case was continued to June 26.

Grasshopper Diet Saves Flier Lost In Everglades

Tampa, June 13.—Cadet Aviator Raymond White, lost for three days in the Everglades, was out of the hospital and back on duty at Carlstrom Field today, little the worse for his experience and ready to fly again tomorrow.

In his story of the experience White stated that after going two days without food he caught and ate grasshoppers which he found in the hummocks.

He said he didn't like to remember that extremity, however. White has been in the Air Service since January 4, 1921, and this was his first serious accident.

POLICEMAN IN BEATING CASE DISAPPEARS

This became known today when Mrs. Katherine O'Day of No. 120 Fourth street, South Boston, obtained a warrant in South Boston Court for the arrest of Butler.

At the time of the alleged attack Mrs. Hellen was in a delicate condition.

She is in a critical condition at her home, and should Butler be found, it is unlikely she will be able to appear against him owing to her serious condition.

ITALIAN ENVOY OFF ON SHORT TRIP HOME

Washington, June 13.—Senator Rolandi Ricci, the Italian ambassador, has taken leave of President Harding and Secretary of State Hughes and has left for New York, where he will sail tomorrow for Europe. The Italian Ambassador will return to the United States early in September.

EAST BOSTON MAN SLAIN IN WORCESTER

Worcester, June 12.—Antonio Manduco, twenty-six years old, of East Boston, was shot through the heart on the sidewalk in front of No. 1 Shrewsbury street, today.

Police are holding three brothers, Dominick, Frank and Mamo Rano. They live at No. 241 Shrewsbury street. The police say they were standing by the body when they arrived on the scene.

Mystery surrounds the slaying. Manduco received mail at a restaurant at No. 16 Moon street, Boston. He has a brother-in-law, Peter Martello, living at No. 173 Lexington street, East Boston. Martello evinced little interest in Manduco's death when told of it by a reporter.

The shooting occurred in the city's Italian quarter. The police believe Manduco was intercepted after a fight in a house in the neighborhood and shot down.

Only one shot was fired at him, that so close the powder scorched the front of his coat.

A passing autoist took the body to the City Hospital, where surgeons said death had been instantaneous.

AWARDED ROYALTIES ON DUMAS' WORKS

Paris, June 12 (By the Associated Press).—The heirs of Auguste Maquet are entitled to half the royalties that have accumulated since 1908 on "The Three Musketeers," and other works, written in collaboration with Alexandre Dumas, it was decided today by the court, which had been hearing the suit brought by Madame Roliffe, widow of the nephew of Maquet. Maquet had by contract abandoned his rights up to 1908, the court found, and since, during his lifetime Maquet waived the right to sign works written with Dumas, their publication may continue over Dumas' sole signature.

THOMAS Q. WITHERSPOON early and late
Sat in his office to sell real estate,
Excellent places he had for all classes—
Mansions for rich, cozy homes for the masses.
If he could get hold of the buyers, he'd sell them—
But how, in a city like this, should he tell them?
And very few folks read the sign on his door;
It was therefore quite plain that his sales would not grow,
Unless he did something to let people know.
"The 'Real Estate' columns will do it," said he,
"They sell things for others and why not for me?"
He placed a big ad and was not surprised

"Sylpho-Nathol hasn't an objection"

"Say 'disinfectant' or 'deodorant' to the average housekeeper and she pictures a messy, sticky, hard-to-use mixture whose smell is almost as unpleasant as the odor it replaces.

"That's why housekeepers are so delighted to find in Sylpho-Nathol an effective preparation that hasn't one of these objections."

Sylpho-Nathol destroys germs—they can't live where it is used, because it is 4½ times stronger than carbolic acid. Yet Sylpho-Nathol is so safe to have in the house as a cake of scouring soap. It cannot hurt your skin nor injure household things.

Sylpho-Nathol banishes bad odors for good. The objectionable smells which develop so rapidly in the best cared for homes quickly disappear, when it is used. But Sylpho-Nathol's own pleasant, friendly odor doesn't linger.

Sylpho-Nathol is easy to use. A teaspoonful in a quart of warm water makes a clean-smelling, pearly-gray solution that's ready for immediate use.

Sylpho-Nathol is a year-through, every-day necessity. In mop-water it destroys the germs that get into floor cracks and corners and can't be budged by ordinary methods. It is indispensable for keeping garbage cans clean and sweet and free from unpleasant odors and disease-carrying flies.

Sylpho-Nathol is an important sanitary measure in the bathroom, for cleaning around the fixtures and as a flush for the closet bowl. When sprinkled in cellar corners, it is a sure preventive of damp, musty cellar smells.

Sylpho-Nathol is also a splendid antiseptic which should be in the medicine chest ready for cuts, burns, bruises, sprains and other home accidents, which require prompt, first-aid treatment.

Sylpho-Nathol comes in four handy sizes, 15c, 35c, 65c, $1.25. Most good grocers and druggists have it. If yours hasn't, he can get it easily. Just ask for it by the name—"Sylpho-Nathol."

Miss R. Crawford Tells How Cuticura Healed Eczema

"Eczema broke out in small pimples under my arms, back of my ears and on my fingers. It became itchy and burned and formed white blisters, which broke and left the affected parts sore. I used several salves and ointments which gave no relief. I was advised by a friend to use Cuticura Soap and Ointment which I did, and after using three cakes of Cuticura Soap and two boxes of Cuticura Ointment I was completely healed." (Signed) Miss Ruth Crawford, 33 Fairmont St., Malden, Mass.

Cuticura Soap daily, with Cuticura Ointment occasionally, prevents pimples or other eruptions. They are a pleasure to use, as is also Cuticura Talcum, a fascinating fragrance for perfuming the skin.

Be Careful What You Wash Your Hair With

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali, which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap and beats anything sold all to pieces. You can get Mulsified at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Two or three teaspoonfuls of Mulsified in a cup or glass with a little warm water is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy, and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff. Be sure your druggist gives you Mulsified.

Question Box for Radio Fans

A. L. G., Newburyport.—Two receiving sets may be used on the same aerial for ordinary reception. A double wire eighty-five feet long should make a suitable aerial if it is sufficiently high. When faced with the alternative of a long lead-in and a lead-in taken from the middle of the aerial, I should choose the former when the aerial was as short as yours. Make the lead-in as straight as possible, and be sure to have it well insulated.

The hook-up that you enclose is not quite correct. You have shown a connection between the primary and secondary circuits which is wrong. Connect the aerial to one binding post of the two-slide tuner, and the ground to one of the slides. This completes the primary. The secondary is attached to the other binding post and the other slider.

Also you have connected the filament of the bulb to the rest of the circuit at two points on the same filament lead. The lead from the coil, and the lead to the phones may be connected by a single connection to the filament lead.

W. E. M., Gloucester—You will not get satisfactory service from dry cells for filament heating. The fact that you get the navy yard shows that your set is fundamentally correct. Your difficulty may be in the failure to tune down to 360 metres. Try inserting a variable condenser in series with the aerial or ground. If a grid leak decreases the intensity of the signals, it shows that its resistance is too low. Your trouble may possibly be some defective part.

J. F. G., Rockland—I must repeat that dry cells are not satisfactory substitutes for a storage battery for lighting the filament of an audion. The hook-up you request is being mailed you.

INTERNATIONAL POLICE TO GET CROOKS ANYWHERE

USING RADIO IN THE BATH TUB

Instead of the old tin tub and a cake of yellow soap, we now have perfumed water in a dazzling white white tub, an 85-cent cake of imported "savon"—and a radio set.

The radio-equipped bath-room is now the very latest, and you can see that Miss Ralfa Hunneman, of No. 21 Sargent street, Dorchester, is not behind the times to any extent when she ablutes. Can you think of any better way to relieve the weary tedium of back-scrubbing than listening to a radio concert.

ROUSES MOTHER AND CHILDREN IN GAS PERIL

A mother and two young children were saved from death today when Miss Edith Grant of No. 3 Ewer street, South Boston, was awakened by gas. She traced it to the apartment below, where Mrs. Johanna Murphy, thirty-six years old, and her two children, John J. Murphy, thirteen years old, and Anna Murphy, eleven, were asleep.

Miss Grant roused the sleeping woman and the children and they were taken to City Hospital. Their condition is not serious. Mrs. Murphy had left the gas burning low, and the strong wind had extinguished the flame, allowing the gas to escape into the room.

WOMEN'S SCREAMS KEEP BULL FROM CHARGING

Madrid, June 13.—When a section of the barrier around the bull ring near here collapsed a number of the spectators were thrown on top of the animal as the matador was preparing for the death thrust. Thirty persons were injured. The bull failed to charge the fallen spectators, being frightened away by the screams of the women and children.

GRIEF HASTENS DEATH OF MRS. PELLETIER

Mrs. Cecelia E. Pelletier, mother of former District Attorney Joseph C. Pelletier, is dead at her Summer home at Kenberma, in Hull, at the age of 58 years. She had been ill for some time.

It was learned today that news of her son's removal from office of district attorney was kept a secret from her for months. It was not until a woman neighbor inadvertently mentioned the subject to her three weeks ago, that she became aware of the fact.

It was reported that she failed rapidly and friends said that the news was such a shock that she became unconscious.

Mrs. Pelletier was honored by the French government about a year ago for assistance rendered that nation during the war. The Gold Medal of the French Republic was conferred on her.

She is the widow of William Pelletier, whose father was for a time consul in this city for the French government. She leaves a brother and four sons. They are all living in Boston. The sons are Joseph C, Victor, Augustus and Louis Pelletier. The brother is Herbert C. Davis.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 10 a. m. at St. Cecelia's Church, Belvidere street, Back Bay.

NEW LAWS CURB FLOW OF LIQUOR FROM CANADA

By the Associated Press.

Ottawa, June 13.—A blow at the transportation of liquors from Canada to the United States is seen in new provisions adopted in the revision of the budget, announced by W. S. Fielding, Minister of Finance.

Liquor exporters, under the new law, are required to furnish a bond double the amount of import duties on such goods to guarantee that the shipment, if by sea, will actually be delivered to the designated destination, and if exported by land or inland navigation will be landed and delivered at the place they are listed for shipment.

The outstanding change in the tariff relates to cigarettes. The duty as proposed on May 29 was $5.25 and 25 per cent. per thousand; it is now reduced to $4.70 and 25 per cent. prior to May 23 the duty on cigarettes was $2.10 and 35 per cent.

Two of the tariff items relate to paper used in the publication of magazines, newspapers and periodicals.

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON BOSTON SOCIETY

Vincent Club Girl to Make Vaudeville Debut in Hub

By BETTY ALDEN.

SOCIAL butterflies are no longer the fashion. Being a mere languid lily whose one accomplishment was to faint gracefully and frequently was quite the thing for the mid-Victorian era.

But the mid-Victorian era is gone, and nowadays the feminine members of even our "very best families" are not ashamed of accomplishing real things, be they in art, music, dramatics or even "trade."

Miss Helenka Adamowska, daughter of the Joseph Adamowskis of Cambridge, finds the dramatic stage far more interesting than the social. This attractive young woman, who, by the way, is a member of the Vincent Club, has always shown such ability in the dramatic line that none of her many friends among Boston's smart set were surprised to hear some time ago that she had joined the ranks of the professionals.

Doubtless they will be not a little interested to learn that for the week beginning June 26 Miss Adamowska will appear with John Craig at Keith's Theatre in a one-act play called "Behind the Screen." I expect that the opening night will find a goodly number of the Adamowskis' friends on hand for Helenka's first professional appearance in her home town.

During the past season she has been playing a small part in "Back to Methuselah," staged by the Theatre Guild, and I am told that she has been filmed with Glenn Hunter in a picture called "The Second Fiddle," which will be shown probably in the Fall.

Society recalls with a good deal of pleasure the various times when Miss Adamowska has taken part in amateur productions, given usually for charity. Not long ago she scored a distinct success in "The White Eagle of Poland," a war play in four episodes, given in aid of the war sufferers of Poland. Last year she did a dashing tambourine dance in "When North Meets South," the Vincent Club play, for which she won no end of applause. Then there was "The Flame of Farrara" given this Winter in aid of the Vassar College endowment, in which the beautiful Polish girl (she is tall and blonde, with deep blue eyes) played the leading part.

SPEAKING of doing things, Miss Olivia James, the oldest daughter of the Edward H. Jamesses of Mt. Vernon street, is still as interested as ever in the designing of stage sets.

Last week I took a flying trip to the Boston Museum School of Fine Arts, where Miss James has been a student for several seasons, in order to see the exhibition of work done by the pupils there. In the room devoted to the work in stage designing I saw the set which Miss James did for the first scene of "Now and Then," the musical play presented in March by the Vincent Club.

During the past Winter I understand that Olivia has had a studio of her own, and evidently the younger daughter of the house, Mary James, caught the art germ, for she, too, has been enrolled at the Art Museum School. The latter belongs to the 1921-23 crop of debbies, though I understand that she is not very keen about social life.

DOWN on the North Shore there is no end of good-natured rivalry these days, for each and every member of the smart coterie there is vieing with his neighbor to raise the most beautiful flowers and finest vegetables.

Competition is waxing very keen, for the annual Horticultural Show held at Horticultural Hall in Manchester will be held on June 27 and 28. This exhibition will make a specialty of roses, sweet peas and early Summer vegetables. Those who saw the exhibition last year recall that the wonderful coloring of the blooms was almost blinding, especially the sweet peas and roses, of which varieties in practically every hue of the rainbow were shown.

S. Parker Bremer of Manchester has offered a prize for the largest number of points won at the show, so there is added impetus.

EXTRA SESSION IF SHIP BILL IS KILLED

Washington, June 13 (By the Associated Press).—President Harding has notified Chairman Campbell of the House Rules Committee that unless the Ship Subsidy Bill is passed prior to adjournment he would feel obliged to call a special session solely for its consideration.

Writing under date of May 26 the President said "so much is involved and such a difficult and discouraging situation will follow if Congress fails to sanction the Merchant Marine Bill that I should feel myself obligated to call Congress immediately in extraordinary session especially to consider it if it were over through any neglect or delay beyond the present term."

The views of the President were set forth in a letter to Chairman Campbell, in which he expressed the hope that the Rules Committee would give privileged status to the shipping bill.

The President said:

"I cannot convey to you how very earnestly I feel the necessity of passing this act. So much is involved and such a difficult and discouraging situatio nwill follow if Congress fails to sanction the merchant marine bill that I should feel myself obligated to call Congress immediately i nextraordinary session to especially consider it if it were over through any neglect or delay beyond the present term.

"I should be more than glad to co-operate in any way that I can in impressing the House with the urgent necessity of the favorable consideration of this bill.

"I am writing an expression of my earnestness to you at this time because I understand it is within the province of the Rules Committee to report a provison under which there may be secured early and I hope, favorable consideration."

DEATH TOLL IN N. Y. STORMS NOW OVER 60

New York, June 13.—The death list resulting from the cyclonic storm that smashed and swirled its way through New York and its suburbs Sunday evening continues to grow. The known toll is now forty-five dead and sixteen others missing.

U. S. to Use Gas in Next War, Says Sims

Albany, N. Y., June 13.—"You can bet your life that if we have another war and if we're attacked we'll use gas," said Rear-Admiral William S. Sims, U. S. N., at the dinner of the Albany Medical College Alumni Association. "If we are attacked we will use gas," he continued, "and we won't care how, when or why."

Gas, he declared, is not the inhuman method of warfare that it generally is believed to be. The general impression that the use of gas was so inhuman, he said, was caused by allied propaganda because the Germans were using it.

DEFENDS TRUE REPRIEVE IN COMMONS

By International News Service.

London, June 13.—The reprieve of Ronald True, former aviator and son of a titled woman, after he had been sentenced to death for the murder of an English girl, was defended in the House of Commons today by Home Secretary Edward Shortt, who granted the reprieve.

"The home office had no knowledge of True's parentage," said Mr. Shortt. "There was no pressure on the home office. The reprieve was the practice of centuries that it is illegal to hang an insane person."

AMAZING ACTS BRING THRILL AT CIRCUS

By FRED J. McISAAC.

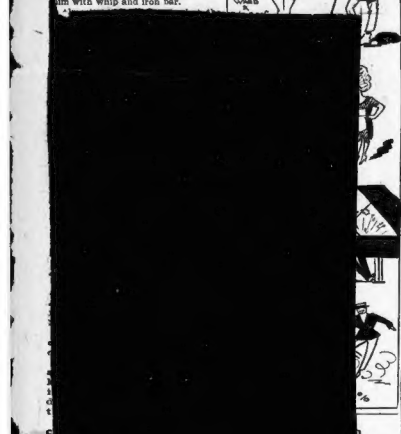
If the late Mr. Barnum and the late Mr. Bailey, and the several Ringling Brothers who have passed on could see the big show which now bears their names, they wouldn't complain.

And yet those gentlemen had developed the circus, before they laid down their burdens, to a point where further progress has been extremely difficult.

The importation last year of a score of German wild animal acts is the biggest development for a long time. These acts are the leading feature of the big show this season.

THRILLING LION ACT.

The feat of Bruno Radke, who lies down and induces a malicious looking lion to sit upon his stomach (Radke's) and purr into his face, is a big jump ahead of the old lion tamer who crept timidly into the cage and kept the beasts away from him with whip and iron bar.



CHANCE TO IMPROVE.

I suspect the chariot and hippodrome races of being fixed. I've always suspected them. So does everybody else. Why couldn't they be on the level and give the audience a chance to do a little betting?

Very likely the world has no more sensations to offer the American circus but attending to these little matters would help some of us older folks to enjoy ourselves more.

SCOLLAY SQUARE OLYMPIA.—One of the snappiest dancing acts presented in Boston for many months was the headline feature on the vaudeville bill at Gordon's Scollay Square Olympia Theatre. It was presented by Ramsdell & Deyo. There were four other excellent acts including Faber & Bernet, in a side-splitting comedy sketch entitled "Off and On," and Crane, May & Crane, the Medley Trio, in a novel singing offering entitled "Songs of Long Ago."

GAYETY THEATRE.—The Gayety Theatre was filled at both performances yesterday when Barney Gerard's "Follies of the Day" began the fifth week of its long run in Boston. This gorgeous revue has made a great hit and the show is making a record as one of the most successful productions shown in Boston this year. A new feature particularly enjoyed by the women patrons was the serving of cold lemonade free.

GORDON'S STRAND.—The last word in the art of love making is seen in the romance that is most delightfully enacted by Gloria Swanson and Rodolph Valentino, star and leading man respectively in "Beyond the Rocks," a new Paramount picture, showing at Gordon's Strand, Upham's Corner, this week.

6,500 ATTEND FURNITURE EXPOSITION

June brides, brides-elect, matrons and grandmothers—not to mention their men folks—gave flattering proof in Mechanics Building last night to the widespread interest in the opening of the first Boston Furniture Exposition.

The exposition is a showing of New England-made furniture and furnishings for the home. The array of exhibits, an artistic and utilitarian display combined, includes everything for outfitting the home not only in the way of furniture, but also in the wayof decoration and adornment.

ATTRACTIVE DECORATIONS.

The exhibits, the background of red, white and blue decorations, with the added touch of green foliage and the general handling of the show reflects upon Alfred DeNoyer, managing director of the exposition. Mr. DeNoyer has arranged the various floor spaces allotted to exhibitors in such a manner as to avoid crowded effect. There is abundant opportunity for all patrons to take in the exhibits to advantage.

A. L. De Noyer

With an opening night attendance estimated by the management as 6,500, the initial presentation of the exposition to the public was regarded as most successful.

The exposition will continue up to and including next Saturday night, June 17. It is open daily to furniture buyers from 8:30 a. m. to 6 p. m. It is open to the public daily from 6 p. m. to 10 p. m. By this convenient arrangement the general furniture trade and the public are equally accommodated.

WELCOME BY MAYOR.

A daily program of particular interest is provided. The formal opening was made with a luncheon at 12:30 p. m. in the balcony, with Mayor James M. Curley extending the "Welcome to Boston" in terms which felicitated Mr. DeNoyer, the exhibitors and the public alike on this display of "quality products," as the Mayor happily expressed it.

At noon luncheon today the exhibitors will hear an address by former Mayor John F. Fitzgerald of Boston on the timely subject: "Exporting of Furniture from Boston."

Tomorrow night will be Governor's Night, and Friday night will be Mayor's Night.

SURPRISE FOR BRIDES.

One of the most compelling exhibits of the entire exposition is the suite of completely furnished rooms, including breakfast room, guest bedroom, master's bedroom, dining room, children's room, hall, living room and kitchen.

The arrangement and interior decorating of the rooms in this suite are by Joseph F. Greene from the Jordan Marsh Company.

Other Theatres

GORDON'S OLYMPIA.—Patrons of Gordon's Olympia Theatre enjoyed a real vocal and comedy treat presented by Anna Chandler, America's celebrated singing comedienne. She offered a novel act that introduced several new song hits. Among other good features on the vaudeville bill was an unique musical and dancing specialty by Haney and Morgan, and a laughable skit, "By the Sea," by Jean and Jacques.

Heading the list of photoplay attractions was the picturization of a popular novel by Edward Peple, "The Bachelor Daddy," and the star was Thomas Meighan.

BOSTON THEATRE.—Conway Tearle's latest drama, "Love's Masquerade," is being shown at the Boston Theatre this week. It is a powerful depiction of the eternal triangle, introducing some new ideas along that line. McLaughlin & Evans offer a touching little skit entitled "On a Little Side Street."

PARK THEATRE.—The first run photoplay bill at the Park Theatre this week includes "The Face of the World," with Barbara Bedford and Edward Hearn, and Sinclair Lewis' Saturday Evening Post story, "Free Air."

MODERN AND BEACON.—The photoplay bill at the Modern and Beacon Theatres this week provides a full two and one-half hours of genuine enjoyment. Tom Moore is seen in "Mr. Barnes of New York" and Wanda Hawley is the star of "The Truthful Liar."

POPULAR ACTRESS IS SISTER OF B. U. STAR

Miss Ursula O'Hare, a member of the Irene company that played at the Shubert Theatre, is a sister of Capt. John J. O'Hare of the Boston University football team.

Miss O'Hare is a graduate of the New England Conservatory of Music. This is Miss O'Hare's first season with the Irene company, she having played with Fred Stone in "Jack O'Lantern," Raymond Hitchcock in "Hitchy Koo," Savage's "Everywoman" and Dillingham's "Apple Blossom."

Plays that Remain

TREMONT THEATRE. — "The Tavern," with George M. Cohon in the leading role, began its fifth week at the Tremont Theatre last evening. This comedy of satirized melodrama provides as joyful an evening as one could hope for.

COLONIAL THEATRE. — The seemingly never-ending popularity of "Sally," with Marilyn Miller and Leon Errol, which began the eighth phenomenal week at the Colonial Theatre last evening, testifies as to its merits as a musical treat.

AROUND WORLD MOVIE TOUR AT TEMPLE

Romance a-plenty was in store for the travelers who accompanied Burton Holmes "Around the World" at its opening night at Tremont Temple. Less than two hours and a half from Times Square to the shadowy mosques of the East Indies! Less than that, even, across the Atlantic and to Liverpool, the first foreign point on the itinerary.

Whether one has globe-trotted or whether one hasn't—especially if one has a hankering for the lore of alien lands and foreign timetables—"Around the World" is a profitable investment.

Burton Holmes, the inimitable traveler, himself, guides one through the winding waterways of Venice and the treacherous trails of the tropical headhunters with equal ease.

The trip is more lasting with him, perhaps, than alone; no ordinary globe trotter could find the hidden ways to unvisited places as does this master of his art.

Without doubt "Around the World" is the only motion picture of its kind, in such completeness, ever compiled. It is a splendid evening's entertainment.

With the aid of the Pilgrim Publicity Association and Mayor Curley, many familiar scenes around Boston itself have been "shot" for the benefit of those who love the home town best.

CAMBRIDGE CLERGY TO DISCUSS SUNDAY BALL

Story by Byron Morgan.
Direction by Philip Rosen

SCORE another one hundred per cent. for Theodore Roberts and Wallace Reid! This pair, aided and abetted by Byron Morgan as author and a disguised Ford as chief "prop," have put over one of the best pieces of film entertainment it has been my luck to see during the past few months of movie reviewing. "Across the Continent," the official title of the production, is headlining at Loew's State Theatre this week.

Here we have sustained action, humor, a pretty girl, a stalwart hero, two ruthless villians, and Theodore Roberts' picturesque cigar. The story deals with crooked work in a coast-to-coast automobile race, in which Reid vows to show up the villain and win with the product of his father's factory, a Dent.

Wallace Reid is, of course, meant to be Edsel Ford, while Roberts is the famous Henry. It is doubtful whether or not a flivver could outdistance all other makes in a cross-country run, but with Wallie Reid at the wheel it stands a chance, very much of a chance.

The chief value is the suspense. That a Ford could spell suspense for even one reel, seems too much to consider, but the fact remains that the last half of the film is one of the most thrilling and satisfying bits of celluloid that has been turned out since Rex Ingram did "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse"—which is unfair comparison, since they are so widely different. Nevertheless, see "Across the Continent" and bring the whole family.

VICTOR HERBERT'S SUCCESS.

NOW that revivals are the order of the day, Victor Herbert has decided to dig out two of his biggest hits for the movies. "Babes in Toyland" and "Mlle. Modiste," are being condensed to make short features, while the composer is rearranging the music for the productions.

Bessie Wynn will be seen in her original role in the version of "Babes in Toyland." The cast for "Mlle. Modiste" has not been announced. Will it include Fritzi Scheff? In the words of Margot Asquith, I wonder? Francis Mangan is arranging the filming.

ART ACORD HURT.

COUNT THAT day as lost that we do not hear of some casualty in the West coast studios. This time it is Art Acord, of the Universal forces, who broke his left leg and fractured his skull when his car overturned at Bakersfield, Cal., on his way to the San Fr.ncc Rodeo.

Acord has just finished work on "In the Days of Buffalo Bill," and was about to embark on a series of two-reelers. It will be several weeks before he will be back on the set.

"C. B." ON SKIGIES.

TRUST "C. B." DeMille to find room for gorgeousness in a story. He has incorporated a series of Roman orgies into the script of Alice Duer Miller's "Manslaughter," in which the heroine, played by Leatrice Joy, has some leopards as pets and throws those whom she dislikes to the starving lions.

Though Mrs. Miller had no such thoughts in the back of her head when she wrote the book, still she has left all matters in De Mille's hands and declares that not only does she not mind his adding the scenes, but she wishes she had thought of them herself. They are used as "flash-backs."

IN "COMBAT."

HARRY CAREY had better look to his laurels as star of the production of "Combat," his first Robertson-Cole picture, for he has such players as Henry B. Walthall and Ethel Grey Terry to compete with—and right on the same set. Walthall has been a star in his own right for a number of years.

CALIFORNIA ROMANCE.

JEROME STORM is hard at work directing a new Fox production, "A California Romance," which is not, the publicity department hastens to assure us, a picture of "love in Hollywood."

FITCHBURG WOMAN TO DIRECT COLLEGE

Pittsburgh, June 13.—Dr. Cora Helen Coolidge of Fitchburg, Mass., former dean of the Pennsylvania College for Women, has accepted the office of acting president of the college until a permanent successor to Dr. John C. Acheson can be chosen. The post was offered to Dr. Coolidge after a meeting of the board of trustees last week. She was dean of the college for eleven years and was acting president for one year.

KEITH'S BILL ABOUNDS IN CLEVER ACTS

Leo F. Reisman and his band are the headliners this week at Keith's. Reisman is a marvellous conducter and his musicians worship him.

Altogether different is Huston Ray. His act was a novel piano performance in which the artist played in combination with the Duo-Art Reproduction piano. His program was chosen from musical classics and given brilliantly with the authority of a musician.

The Duo-Art has been used as soloist, reproducing the playing of the great pianists appearing with the New York Symphony Orchestra in New York city.

Whiting and Burt deceased 'em with their songs. They've dropped their ornate vehicle of a season or so ago and are back to the things they can do best.

Moody and Duncan work very much like the Watson Sisters, only more so. "The Weak Spot" was much better than the average sketch. The Faynes opened the bill with a good contortion act. Alleen Stanley held attention; Hoy Rice and Mary Werner slapsticked on a painter's scaffold, and La Pilarica Trio closed the bill with a novelty dancing act.

"I WAS FRAMED," SAYS POLICEMAN

'MRS. BEN TEAL' IS AGAIN IN TROUBLE

So will Lucerne, Switzerland.

Indeed, the police of both cities have extended a warm invitation to Mrs. Paddleford to drop in. They are so anxious to have her that they have actually gone so far as to demand the extradition of the beautiful cosmopolite.

At the present time Mrs. Paddleford is in Vienna, visiting at police headquarters there. She is accompanied by a young man and his tutor. The young man is said to be her son.

The reason why the Vienna police are reluctant to permit Mrs. Paddleford to continue her continental meanderings is because of a small army of hotels and shopkeepers who have certain bills they desire paid if possible. This, too, it must be confessed, is why Mrs. Paddleford suddenly became so popular with the good friends of Paris and Switzerland.

While in Paris Mrs. Paddleford, occupied an expensive suite in the fashionable Hotel Crillon. She ordered lavishly from the various dressmaking shops, and when the bills arrived found it convenient to depart, neglecting to pay her hotel bill. This had previously occurred in Lucerne, the police say.

The authorities say that there are forty complaints of fraud awaiting Mrs. Paddleford.

This represents another incident—a trifling to be called a chapter—in the life of the interesting woman who, thirteen years ago, was the wife of Ben Teal, the theatrical producer, and figured luridly in the Frank J. Gould divorce case.

Mrs. Teal at the time was charged with the subornation of perjury in that she was said to have offered Mabel McCausland $800 to swear falsely she had seen Gould and Bessie de Voe, an actress, in the Hotel Glenmore. Mrs. Teal was convicted and sentenced to serve a year at Blackwell's Island, but was released after ten months and the indictment against her dismissed.

In 1917 Teal brought suit for $4,000 against August Schneider, head waiter at the Hotel Astor, alleging alienation of affections. He charged that while he went to his work each day Schneider, the husband of Albertina Rasch, the dancer, would visit his wife in their suite. Teal died just before the suit was to be tried.

Woman Battles to Get Edison Service

The Public Utilities Commission today granted a hearing to Mrs. John H. Condon of No. 843 Columbia road, Dorchester, on her complaint that the Edison Company refused to furnish electricity to her. At the close of the hearing it was agreed that an investigation would be made by the commission.

Agents of the company admitted the applications for service, but claimed there are no service lines near the home of Mrs. Condon and the cost of laying conduits or wires is greater than the amount of service.

ARMY MAN ACCUSED BY GIRL

Waltham Miss and Her Child to Face in Court Soldier Who Wed Another

The story of a shattered romance, in which an army Lothario loved and ran away, will be told in the Waltham Court on June 20, when the trial of Lester Herndon, formerly of the Third Service Signal Corps begins. He is charged with a serious offence.

The girl in the case is Miss Helen Roberts of Waltham, now in the Florence Crittenton Home with her month-old infant. Herndon, who was dishonorably discharged from the army, is in the East Cambridge jail, unable to obtain bonds.

To further complicate matters, the young man, said to be a native of the South, has married another. Miss Lea Degardin, who lives near Ft. Ethan Allen, Vt., where Herndon was stationed.

According to counsel for Miss Roberts, who is nineteen years old, the story the young woman will tell, with her baby in her arms, is replete with pathos.

Even after Herndon's arrest, according to the lawyer, Miss Roberts forgave him and he promised to marry her, but instead slipped away to Vermont and the arms of another.

Major-General Clarence R. Edwards, who investigated the charges before recommending Herndon's discharge, said:

"There are two kinds of slackers in the world, war slackers and love slackers. I have handled this case over the civil authorities."

The romance between the young Waltham girl and the dashing soldier began more than a year ago, according to counsel, for Miss Roberts, who had left her home in Maine some time previously, and had obtained a position in Waltham, with an income barely sufficient to meet her needs.

One day she met Herndon. His engaging manner and manlist appearance fascinated Miss Roberts, who fell violently in love, according to her lawyer.

Herndon appeared to reciprocate her affection, but to the casual observer it was evident that there was no whole-hearted spirit of self-sacrificing affection manifested on his side, the lawyer declared. The soldier returned to Fort Ethan Allen and communicated frequently with the anxious girl waiting in Waltham.

In fact, the girl's lawyer stated, he called her a good many times on the telephone, but always reversed the charges. At one time Miss Roberts, whose finances were limited, received a telephone bill for $11, he calls put through from Fort Ethan Allen.

In the course of time the young woman wrote to Herndon that she was to be a mother, but he was unable to leave the army post. Early in May the child was born and the news was sent to Vermont. According to Miss Roberts' attorney, Herndon wrote letters to her after that date in which he spoke

HAYES AND ROBERTS IN TIFF

Dry Chief "Bawled Out" by Commissioner for Failure to Observe Court Etiquette

Chief Prohibition Enforcement Officer James P. Roberts was criticized by United States Commissioner Hayes today during a liquor hearing for failure to observe court etiquette.

"Don't you know you can't speak to a witness under cross examination?" Commissioner Hayes asked the prohibition enforcement officer.

"No, I don't" replied Mr. Roberts.

"Then it is time you learned," was the commissioner's retort. "It is time you learned that and other things."

The case being heard was that of Steve Sevia, manager of a hotel at Salisbury Beach which was raided by Federal officers and where liquor was alleged to have been found.

Another tiff occurred between the commissioner and Mr. Roberts during the hearing of Fred A. Conelle, proprietor of the Venetian Gardens, another hostelry raided at Salisbury Beach.

A waiter testified that he had served liquor there, once to a judge, he said.

OFFICER REINSTATED BY COMMISSIONER

Patrolman Yates was dismissed from the force May 31 for conduct unbecoming an officer. He was accused of accepting a bribe in connection with a liquor case. The trial board found him guilty. He appealed the finding, claiming he was victim of "frameup" and was heard by Commissioner Wilson, who ordered him reinstated with back pay for the period of his suspension.

HARVEY B. YATES.

'RECEIVED NO CASH' --YATES

Colored Man, Restored to the Force, Refers to 'Marked' Bills Report

With these words Patrolman Harvey B. Yates, colored, of the Roxbury Crossing Police Station, charged his brother officers with deliberately attempting to have him ousted from the Boston police force.

Yates was reinstated yesterday by Police Commissioner Wilson, having been discharged from the force May 3', when three police captains found him guilty of taking a bribe of $30 from a Roxbury woman.

Yates, a war veteran, went back to duty today. He was given two routes to patrol around the Parker Hill district.

"Were you framed by brother officers at Station 10?" he was asked.

"Yes," he replied.

"Who were they?"

"I am not mentioning any names," declared the officer.

"At the hearing in my office," explained Commissioner Wilson, "Yates did not say positively that he was framed, but that he thought he was framed. He mentioned no names, except to state that it was not the captain whom he thought framed him.

"When he said during the course of the hearing that he thought he had been framed, Captain Gallivan said, 'And I suppose you think I framed you.'

"Yates quickly replied, 'No, not you, captain.'

"No formal complaint has been made to me, and as Yates has mentioned no names, I am not investigating the case and at present contemplate no investigation."

Yates today declared that witnesses at the hearing said that Captain Gallivan had given Mrs. Dore Paul two marked $10 bills, telling her to give them to Yates.

"The first time I ever saw this woman to my knowledge," he declared, "was on May 5, when she came to me on the street and asked me where to find a man named Mulligan. Then she asked for a man named Oliver. I later learned she wanted these men to get her husband out of jail.

"I did not see her again until May 16, when she came up to me and said that other officers had told her that I had telephoned to head quarters about her husband's place. I told her I had not phoned, and knew nothing about the case.

"Later that day I went to the Superior Court.

"Sergeant Dines came into the courtroom and told me the boss wanted to see me. I was taken to police headquarters and I learned later they were looking for two marked $10 bills which Captain Gallivan is said to have given the woman to give to me.

"PIRATE'S" VICTIM IS COMING HOME

TIRED OF GAY WHITE LIGHTS

Mother Says Welcome Awaits Paulette Grafton, Who Took Poison

Paulette Lorayne Grafton is coming home to Malden.

Disillusioned, and victim of the millionaire Pittsburgh bigamist, Joseph Douglas Grafton, she is now slowly recovering from self-administered poison with which she tried to end her unhappy life. Her mother waits for her in the little cottage on Lebanon street, Malden.

"Paulette is going to leave New York forever," said that old mother today.

"She is tired of the mockery of the white lights, the glare, the falseness, the glitter and the noise of Broadway, vulgarest of all streets in the world.

"My little girl had learned her hard lesson lying there in a New York hospital where they took her after she swallowed the poison in the Pennsylvania station.

STILL HER BABY.

"She has telephoned to me from her sick bed that she is coming back. And my arms ache to hold her tight once more for she is my baby still.

"Poor Paulette! She had a hard time, but if I can help it she never shall suffer that way again. I want to protect her and to nurse her back to health and strength."

"Can you imagine a man who would deceive and then desert a girl like that?" asked the mother, tears trickling down her cheeks.

"I was so proud of Paulette when she appeared here in Boston with the 'Oh! Look!' company.

"She was happy too. Everything seemed smooth for her. This man, Grafton, was courting her then, telling her of his millions, offering her his name. She finally married him—against my will. Then came the desertion and the exposure of his marriage to other women—many other women.

STILL LOVES BIGAMIST.

"That broke my girl's heart. She sickened of the show girl's life. She left her position. Her husband did not support her, and she was without money.

"On top of that misfortune I was taken sick and she was unable to write because she could not send me the money I needed. She did not have money even to get back here. There was the poison.

"She is sorry now and wants to live. The doctors says that she will, and that all she needs is care and nursing. She'll have both here."

OUIJA BOARDS GONE INTO THE DISCARD

Where's your's?

Give it to baby or it is in the attic?

Or did you toss it in the ash can?

What? Why the ouija board. Seems like only yesterday the country was palpitating breathlessly of the strange freaks of the marvelous ouija. Now it's practically unheard of. Ma's interested in radio these days, Pa's satisfied to be left alone, so lo, the poor ouija lies cobwebbed and neglected.

The simple little board contrivance that entertained millions only two years ago is now used only in the haunts of the spiritualists, the automatic writers and the spook artists. Rage for the ouija board became country-wide following ouija board seances given by Mrs. John Curran, alleged medium of Patience Worth, most famous of American controls.

Sales were huge. Department stores and toy shops sold millions of ouija boards. Now they rarely sell one.

Boston dealers said today that the demand for ouija boards has vanished.

Ouija boards were first manufactured in this country about twenty years ago. Their home here is in Baltimore, where the Fuld family were the original manufacturers. Many brands flooded the market when they became the rage, but fundamentally they are all alike in design and make.

Thus, between dimes and quarters, we have a wonderful foundation for a bright and happy vacation in the mountains. I. G.

In England Miss Edith Sigourney gladdened the hearts of her Boston friends by scoring an easy victory over an English opponent in the singles matches at Beckenham. Play is for the Kent championship. It is a classic among the devotees of the net game in London. There is a possibility of Miss Sigourney gaining the coveted Kent cup.

At Rye, N. Y., Miss Leslie Bancroft was one of the two leading contestants today in the opening rounds of the annual invitation singles at the Apawamis Club. She has won both her matches, one by default and the latter by defeating Mrs. J. Sacks, 6—0, 6—2.

WEIGHTY GIRLS TROT IN PARK TO LOSE FAT

New York, June 13.—Whatever is the opposite of a hunt—the procedure by which you try to lose something instead of to find it—is on. Call it the great anti-fat scramble.

Mrs. Georgia Heffner, who wanted to avoid the traffic cops, chose the Upper West Side for the scene.

The day was made for fat losers. "Aunty-Fat" Heffner was all ready for them when the secret hour appointed for the rendezvous arrived. She had mapped out a nice little stretch from her home at No. 62 West Eighty-eighth street up Amsterdam avenue to 110th street, across to Fifth avenue and down to the reservoir, where she intended the anti-fatters to trot for all they were worth.

TEACHERS ARE ACCUSED OF BRUTALITY

Miss Alice May, fifth grade teacher in the Marshall Spring School at Watertown, and Miss Gladys R. Brown, fourth grade teacher in the same school, charged with having brutally beaten thirteen-year-old John A. Stone, a pupil, appeared in Waltham Court today. Their cases were continued until June 21, by agreement reached outside of court.

According to the charges preferred against the two teachers by Mrs. August S. Stone, mother of the boy, the beating the boy is said to have received from the teachers when he refused to sit down on the floor of the class room, was so severe that the services of Dr. Leon G. Rondeau of Boston had to be called in by his parents. The story of the affair as told by by the young pupils is that the class had been having a spelling lesson and he got into talk with a girl classmate.

Miss May is alleged to have ordered him to sit down on the floor, but freshly oiled. This he refused to do saying that he did not wish to ruin a new suit of clothes.

Miss May is said to have struck him with a book on the head and to have later called in Miss Brown to hold the boy while he was whipped.

Mrs. Stone declares this is the fourth time the teacher had beaten John and that other mothers have complained of the treatment their children had received at the hands of the teacher.

Varied Activities of Women

Twenty-six women are holding elective offices in New Mexico and seventy in Ohio.

Mrs. Ellen Duane Davis of Philadelphia, who is opposing George S. Graham for a seat in Congress, is a great-great-granddaughter of Benjamin Franklin.

In Russia women of all ages and classes smoke in their rooms, in the trains, in the restaurants and shops, and it is not uncommon to see them smoke on the streets.

What seems to be the most important medical discovery of the century is that of Dr. N. Kritch, a woman, who has just announced the discovery of the typhus germ.

Loses Cash and Gems in 'Acid Test of Love'

New York, June 13.—Miss Mary Thurman was held in bail of $1,000 on a larceny charge here today. She is charged by her fiance, Fowler Yoemans, with appropriating $300 and his diamond stickpin. In telling the court about the alleged larceny, Yoemans said Miss Thurman said she was taking the money and stickpin in order to put him "to the acid test of love."

4 FAMILIES IN DEDHAM FIRE DRIVEN OUT

Four families were driven to the street, an aged woman being carried to safety, by fire for which a general alarm was sounded in Dedham today.

The lower portion of the Greenleaf building, a three-story brick structure in Memorial square, was damaged to the extent of $7,500.

Miss Anna Grenlaw, an elderly woman living on the second floor, was asleep when the fire was discovered. Patrolman Michael Tarpey and Charles Conlon broke down the door of her apartment, and after arousing her carried her to the street.

The other occupants of the building groped their way safely through the choking black smoke and made their way to the street unassisted.

A dog imprisoned in the fruit store of C Sallenne was rescued by Hoseman Daniel Kennedy.

The fire started in the basement of the store of Ginter & Co. and spread to the fruit store of C. Sallenne, and the tailor shop of Charles Silles. The flames were confined to the basement and first floor.

Working in the Ginter store, Captain William Hennessey fell through the floor to the basement. He escaped with minor injuries.

HARDING WILL COME TO HUB THIS MONTH

For the first time since his election, President Harding will visit Boston, it was announced today. The visit is expected on or about June 21.

On June 29 the president is scheduled to go to New Haven, Ct., to attend commencement exercises at Yale, where Mr. Harding will receive the degree of doctor of law.

The following day the President will receive the same degree at Harvard, his party coming from New Haven to Boston and Cambridge overnight. Whether or not the trip from Washington to New Haven and Boston will be made in the presidential yacht Mayflower has not been decided.

Upon their return from Harvard University the President and Mrs. Harding will prepare for a two-day motor trip to Marion, O. They expect to be in their home town in time to participate in the Fourth of July celebration there.

CHEAPER ICE FOR LAWRENCE STRIKERS

DRAWS threads is one of the coolest things as a Summer frock can offer in the way of trimming, and when the fabric is pale blue handkerchief linen, with a binding of white braid, nothing could be more delicious looking. Tuckings of the material indicate the waistline, and a tiny jabot drapery at one side balances a narrow frill at the other.

The drapery is of an unusually attractive sort, with pipings of the black mousseline that makes the cuffs and the sash.

wages have gone over the dam, the well-known prowling wolf of lean times has been stalking homes and there are pronounced symptoms of creeping paralysis in the business district.

Hide it and disguise it as they may, the real living of the strikers is a condition of misery and suffering. Business and trade are stagnant.

MASTER OF MANCHESTER.

All this could be changed by a wave of the hand of Frederic C. Dumaine. If he would only listen to reason everything would be different. Although his business office is in Boston and his home in Concord, Mass., he is master of Manchester. No overlord of feudal times ever had a more exacting system of dealings with petty barons, vassals and serfs than this man Dumaine.

He is the treasurer of the Amoskeag mills and directs and controls their policies. Within a year and a half, he has decreed that the wages of the workers be reduced forty-two and one-half per cent. A cut of twenty-two and a half per cent. was accepted, but, when, last February, another cut of twenty per cent. was ordered, and another hour a day was added to the schedule and extra burdens of labor proposed, 99 per cent. of the workers quit.

They are still killing time. The strike-leaders are and from the beginning have been willing to arbitrat and compromise and anxious for a fair and honorable settlement of the differences existing between them and the mill management. Several attempts at conferences have been made. In every instance the strikers have agreed to confer, but the underlings of Dumaine have refused to do so.

Private contributions, tag day funds, drives of various kinds and commissaries have helped to keep the strikers sheltered and fed. Some of the places of shelter for families of strikers are not so bad, but the places called home by many would be snubbed by the horses and dogs of American stockholders, who believe flivvers of Amoskeag overseers would not slow down in front of them.

Mill windows are opened every morning, there's a rattling and whirring of machinery and semi-comic attempt at busy times. But it is all bluff and noise and no production.

BOYS OUT ANOTHER.

On February 13 last a few mill workers passed through the gates. That's the day the strike began. The normal force of employes is about 16,000. The Amoskeag Company controls all the mills in Manchester. A few weeks ago it bought out its only competitor, the Stark Mills paying $4,000,000 right after saying it was so poor and business was so bad that it must reduce wages, increase hours of labor and demand more output from its workers.

Not more than 200 workers have come back to the mills since the strike was declared. The leaders say this is a life and death struggle. They are trying an experiment. They intend to obey the laws and preserve order, win or lose, no matter how harsh and autocratic the chief of police may be, to keep their heads no matter how many times he may lose his, to put their faith and their trust in public opinion finally swinging in behind their cause and showing the Amoskeag managers the difference between the conditions they have laid down for their workers and the much-vaunted American standards of living.

Through the ranks of the strikers there is the settled conviction that, if they fail now, they must submit to an era of mill slavery or join an industrial revolution. The leaders insist the latter is what they are most anxious to avert but fear it is the whirlwind the mill managers are sowing in the delusion that only unionism would be wrecked.

The mill workers will not go back to a fifty-four-hour week. The other conditions imposed by the Amoskeag managers—reduced pay and more output—they will agree to arbitrate. They have asked Governor Albert O. Brown to or to call an extra session of the Legislature to consider the question of a forty-eight-hour bill. He has refused to do this on the ground that an extra session would cost the State $6,000 and because he believes the Legislature is opposed to such a bill.

The leaders obeyed Gov. Brown's invitation to meet with him for the purpose of arranging a settlement by conference of interested parties but they could not accept the form in which he tendered his good offices. He demanded that the strikers make material concessions as the price of his intervention. The strike leaders refused on the ground that, if they must yield points and finally make concessions, it should be done during the period of arbitration and upon the recommendation of arbitrators.

They counter proposed that he see the mill officials and suggest to them that they make material concessions and leave the rest to arbitration. The Governor could not see it that way and there the matter rests so far as intervention by the chief executive of the State is concerned.

CRITICISES GOVERNOR.

Governor Brown has been the president of the Amoskeag Bank in Manchester for several years. The bank, as its name indicates, is linked with the interests of the Amoskeag mills.

One of the most prominent men of Manchester was asked by the representative of the Boston American why the Governor has not shown more activity in urging a settlement of the strike.

"That's easy," he replied, "for the simple reason that Governor Brown is a large holder of Amoskeag stock and his business and social relations are with the Amoskeag crowd. It is only natural, isn't it, that, where those relations are, there, too, will be found his strongest political friendship. How could you expect a Governor to be disinterested under such circumstances?

If this is an unfair statement, the Boston American will be willing to publish one from Gov. Brown to correct it and also to give generous space to any explanation he may wish to make, relative to his Amoskeag holdings and associations and his attitude toward the industrial situation in Manchester.

The statement is made in an open letter to the public, recently issued by the mill officials, that "the questions at issue between the Amoskeag and its employes are vital to every citizen of New Hampshire." There is no doubt about that, and, therefore, as it would interest every citizen to know just what the Governor of the State has done to bring about a resumption of industry in the Amoskeag mills, the Boston American gladly will give him all the space he wants to tell of his dealings with both parties to the dispute.

Strike leaders say they would be willing to rest their case in the hands of Rt. Rev. George Albert Guertin, Bishop of Manchester.

Merchants, professional men and others outside the immediate Amoskeag sphere agree that he would be a most potent influence for a satisfactory settlement if the mill officials would accept him as the umpire in the event of his willingness to serve.

It is estimated that 75 per cent. of the textile workers are of the Catholic faith, although of several nationalities. Among the Protestant clergy there is a feeling that the advice of Bishop Guertin, either as the sole umpire or the deciding voice in an arbitration conference would be ideal. A number of Protestant clergymen have tried in vain to bring mill officials into a strike settlement conference. In fact, there is a general wish and hope among the men and women of Manchester that Bishop Guertin be encouraged by both elements of the industrial controversy to point the way to a speedy and acceptable solution.

REAL SITUATION IN MANCHESTER STRIKE

THE Boston American today begins the story of Amoskeag.

It tells of the industrial struggle that has been going on in Manchester and six other strike centres in New England for eighteen weeks.

It explains the issues involved. It pictures the overlord of Manchester, who could settle the strike and refuses to do so.

It gives the attitude of the Governor and tells of the general demand for the selection of Bishop Guerten as umpire to lay down the rules of a just settlement.

There are interesting references to picketing, to the rule of the chief of police and to the good conduct of the strikers.

The Manchester strike is more than a New Hampshire problem, because back of it are the questions of Southern mills' competition and the maintenance of the beneficial laws of New England relative to the employment of women and children.

This is the opening chapter. There will be another tomorrow, and the concluding chapter on Thursday.

JOCK MALONE IS THE CHAMPION WIT OF THE PRIZE RING

DOWNEY AND WALKER ON CALLING LIST

By JACK CONWAY.

Jock Malone.

Jock Malone, most stylish and wittiest of our brave fistic knights, will begin warming up for his ten-round battle with Mickey Walker at the Boston Arena next Monday night when he meets Bryan Downey in a ten-session quarrel at Auburn, Ill. this p m. Malone and Downey have collided five times for a share but always enabled him to purge to victory. He has not any intention of departing from the regular procedure of things this evening

Jack Dempsey is supposed to be a swell dresser. He got the low down on spats, pocket handkerchiefs and such things when prattling with Mary, Doug and Chrisy out in Hollywood.

But when it comes to hopping into a makeup and acting the part they all have to doff their new Summer lids to Mister Jock Malone of St. Paul. He looks as though he was born to wear the latest Broadway styles. As he likes clothes next to winning a scrap, he acts his part perfectly.

Life is just one good time after another for Malone. Some people claim he does not take boxing seriously. They used to say Babe Ruth didn't take baseball seriously. As both of these birds appear to rock their way to victories in a very nonchalant manner, it would be good policy for a lot of other athletes we know not to give too much attention to gazing at their batting averages.

They Call Jock the Rapid fire Buzzsaw

They call Malone The Buzzsaw because he is one of the wittiest and fastest talkers in the grand old boxing game. This is quite a distinction when one considers that Jock is objured to bat against such celebrated linguists as Leo P. Flynn, Eddie Mack, Tommy Walsh, George Lawrence, Battling Nelson and others just as dangerous with the old repartee.

"Who's going to call the balls and strikes in this fight," was the opening shot of the Western breeze kid when he last showed in Boston

"You know there's liable to be a pitcher and a catcher in this game My old left hand is working like a machine gun. And what it is sputtering to the Queen's taste somebody is apt to get bumped very hard.

Says Jack Britton Is Quite A Pitcher

"Speaking of pitchers, I went down to Ohio one time before I knew as much as I now do about boxing I was to meet a fellow by the name of Jack Britton. You know, that old gent from New York with the long whiskers. Mind you, I've pitched to many a boxer boob who had to catch 'em, but this was a new treat to me as I was the guy who was being popped all over the ring

"Britton pitched good enough that day to make old Cy Young's best feat look like a Chinese laundry check after a thunderstorm. When that fellow had my left eye a big enough to suit him, he just kept sticking his glove in it and rubbing it around.

"About the only time I ever saw his left glove was when it was in my eye. And when you think he's only getting attention to your eye, he hops a right hand punch down under and, oh, how he can hurt.

"But times have changed. Britton has slipped down the greased toboggan and I'm as fit as a new pair of pants. I'm anxious to get my glove in Jack's eyes. Just for old times sake, don't-cha know?"

Malone Plans to Laugh His Way to Two Ring Titles

Malone, battling under the direction of Jack Lewis and Tommy Walsh, plans to laugh his way to the world's welterweight and middleweight championships. He is respectful when talking about Britton, but gets a little bit unkind when talking about Johnny Wilson, middleweight boss.

"Wilson! Where did I hear that name before? Oh, yes. That's the bird who made such a rotten fight with Bryan Downey at Jersey City. He must be a swell champion if he can't wallop old Bryan. Guess I also read something about Wilson signing to meet Harry Greb and then quitting out of the match. Hooray for Charlestown, I say. Guess the Minute Men must have all joined the Navy.

"What would I do to that fellow Wilson? Oi, oi, how I would like to get a right hand clout at that glass jaw of his."

Britton Off to Train

POST FORFEIT FOR WILLS BOUT

New York, June 13.—According to reports, Paddy Mullins will today post a challenge on behalf of Harry Wills and forfeit with the New York State Boxing Commission for a bout with Jack Dempsey for the world's heavyweight championship. Mullins will ask the commission, if the challenge is accepted, to appoint within a certain time, to proceed as it did in the cases of Johnny Kilbane, featherweight champion, and Johnny Wilson, middleweight title holder.

These latter are given until June 20 to post the respective final pledges of Johnny Dundee and Harry Greb or suffer the penalty of being barred in a number of States.

Baseball, essentially an American game, now has only one full-blooded representative of the original American, the Indian in the big leagues.

He is Moses Yellowhorse of the Pittsburgh Pirates. At different times other Indians have played in the big leagues and have been greater players than Yellowhorse. Sovalexis, a blue streak, until cut down by John Rariegcorn; Bender one of the mightiest of his day; Meyers, the mission Indian; Jim Thorpe and others.

It is likely that there are scores of men playing professional ball who can trace Indian blood somewhere along their ancestral veins. They owe the Indian for their natural athletic prowess, endurance and courage

The amendment has been passed by both Houses of the Legislature.

Babe's Rivals Forge Still Farther Ahead

New York, June 13.—Three of Babe Ruth's home run rivals had forged still farther ahead of the Yankee slugger today as the result of a simultaneous skirmish yesterday.

Ken Williams of the St. Louis Browns, who has been in a woeful slump for several weeks, cracked out his fifteenth circuit drive; Rogers Hornsby, his National League fellow townsman, drove out his fourteenth, and Bing Miller of the Athletics collected his thirteenth.

HARVARD FIRST CREW BEATEN BY SECOND

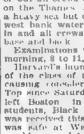
Harvard Training Quarters, Red Top, Ct., June 13.—An unusual heavy northwest wind this evening prevented Coach Howe from sending all crews on the river and only the varsity and second crews braved the sea and after much difficulty reached the west bank, where a brush was held for three-quarters of a mile down stream, the second crew winning by a quarter of a length.

On the return to the quarters the second crew was again leading by a small margin ("Only I know directed that the freshman and second crews go for a long walk through the woods for exercise.

The morning work was even shorter but all crews took their first row on the Thames. A stiff wind kicked a heavy sea but Cable the 'Vee' of the west bank water was found to row in and all crews went to the naval base and back.

Examinations will be held each morning, 8 to 11, until Friday. The crew's launch, the "32," a gift of the class of that year, has been rushed to Cable where it is at Red Top since Saturday, when the launch left Boston in charge of two students, Black and Durkee. Word was received this afternoon the boat was safe at Wakefield, R. I., and would proceed to Red Top at once.

SMITH ENTERS IN THREE EVENTS



Irving H. Smith

Irving H. Smith, Yale, C. C. athlete, has forwarded his entrance blank to C. E. Foster for the "Y" meet at the Stadium on Saturday. Smith is a former Brewster Academy youth, who gained prominence while at the prep school. He will compete at the Eastern "Y" meet in the 200-yard run, high hurdles and broad jump.

BROOKLINE BOWS TO EVERETT IN TENTH

Everett High, wound up its Suburban League schedule by defeating Brookline, 8 to 4, in ten innings, at Tech Field, Brookline, yesterday. The game was a long drawn-out affair, with Brookline making numerous errors.

Harold Hall was on the mound for Everett, and with the exception of the seventh inning held Brookline batters well in hand. For six innings the latter went hitless, but the seventh saw the bombardment which netted Brookline four runs.

After Brookline had tied up the fray in the seventh, the game was a pitchers' battle between Hall and Kendrick of Brookline. A barrage of hits in the tenth, coupled with unsteady support by the Brookline infield, gave Everett four runs.

Hall tightened in the tenth and caused two of Coach Carroll's boys to fan. He struck out eleven batters in today's game, making a total of 128 for the season.

JOHNNY BUFF WILL MEET JOE LYNCH ON JULY 10

New York, June 13.—Articles for the coming fracas between Benny Leonard and Lew Tendler will be signed today. This scrap is slated for Boyle's Thirty Acres, Jersey City, on July 30.

Johnny Buff, the bantamweight champion, will defend his laurels against Joe Lynch on July 10 at the Velodrome. It was originally intended to stage this show on July 1, but the champion desired more time.

Summers Fights Kelly

CHAMP BASEBALL NINE COACHED BY GIRL

St. Louis, June 13.—A championship baseball nine developed and coached by a woman won individual gold medal and silver loving cup in the public school league here, which has just closed its season.

The coach, Miss Eliza Starcke, had general supervision of the Meramec School team in practice and in playing. The team manager and captain directed the club on the playing field after advice from their coach The medals and loving cup were offered by the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Miss Starcke says she has been interested in athletics from the standpoint of a teacher who attempts to direct the physical development of a student as well as the mental.

"Our winning the pennant was not all my work," she said. "The boys had the proper spirit, played good ball and were determined to show other teams they could win even if they did have a woman for a coach. I'm for them and they're for me, and by working together we won.

"Some boys can play certain places better than others. I've learned. But the best way to manage a boys' team is to depend upon the youngsters themselves and made them believe they have to come through, and somehow or other they will if you encourage them.

"We first learned to hit the ball and hit it hard. Good batting with good pitching won for us. Our field was pretty good as a whole, but the main thing about our team winning was due to the boys' eagerness, determination and willingness. If I did not know the proper play or just what to call it, they did."

Goode or	Stiehlhiher, or

Another big rivalry clash is on the Harvard schedule for the baseball fans when Harvard meets Dartmouth at Soldiers' Field tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock.

It looks right now as if the Green team from Hanover, N. H., will not be able to continue the string of victories which it has gained over Harvard since 1905, with the exception of the game played in 1916, which Eddie Mahan and his teammates won 11 to 8.

"Heb" Russell, who has won seven and lost one this season, will be on the mound on Wednesday afternoon. Stiehlhiher or Tracy will do the box work for Dartmouth. Stiehlhiher lost to Huntzinger of Penn last Saturday 7 to 6. This is not so bad when one stops to consider that the fleet Huntzinger has hurled his team to nine victories in as many starts. There is a chance of "Eddie" Goode getting the hurling for Harvard, but since he went through fifteen gruelling frames against Holy Cross last Saturday it is more likely that Russell will start.

If the Crimson fielders show the stuff they did at Fenway Park there need be no fear but that Russell will come through with flying colors.

Coach Tesreau, the former Giant pitcher, who is coaching the Hanoverians, will see to it that his charges, if they do go down to defeat before the best ball team that Harvard has had for years, go down fighting.

LINCOLNS WILL OPPOSE THE NEWBURYPORT TEAM

Tomorrow evening the Lincoln Baseball Club of Somerville will have for their opponents the Newburyport Club at Lincoln Park, Somerville.

On the Newburyport team are some former major league stars, including Durning, former pitcher of Tigers, Ganzel of the White Hose, and Bates, the New York State League star. Wentworth and Andrews will be additional twisters who they carry along also.

The Lincolns will send Al Davidson to the peak, while Bill Devine will be seen on the receiving end. Davidson has won six consecutive games for the Lincoln Club, and hopes to add another at the expense of the Newburyport Club.

George Dowd, of Boston College fame, will bring strength to the Somerville outfit, and plans to stay with them for the remainder of the season.

COMMERCE HAS ONE MORE CHANCE

By FRED C. LANE.

The fight for the championship of the City League is hotter than ever now. Commerce, which was defeated by Mechanic Arts Saturday, is still in the race. Their one big chance to redeem themselves presents itself today when they meet English High at Fenway Park.

It's the most important game that Commerce has played this year, so that no sand let ball will be tolerated by Coach Sherlock, who is out to win the title. Commerce smothered English on their last meeting and should duplicate that feat today.

Newton High has closed its baseball season. This comes direct from Coach Allie Dieckmann. The many examinations that take place between now and next week make it impossible for the boys to play winning baseball and pass the exams at the same time.

Lynn English, with 16 straight wins, will perhaps play Lawrence High, which has a fine record on the diamond. Coach Burton of the former school is leaving no stone unturned to arrange a trip for the boys who have brought glory to the school.

Orange High School, winner of the Central Massachusetts championship for the past four years, would make an ideal opponent for Lynn English. The boys of the hilly country suffered but one defeat this year and are said to have a sweet ball club.

CARP WILL NOT MEET GREB THIS SUMMER

Georges Carpentier says he cannot come to America this Summer to meet Harry Greb. He is matched to meet Nilles in Paris in September and Beckett in London in October.

Georges will now be accused of picking "set-ups." A little over a year ago hundreds and hundreds of columns of words from every of his gamenegs were being printed all over America.

The man who was not afraid to meet the so-called man-killer, Dempsey, will not be charged with dodging the light-hitting Greb. It is a curious and changeable world, this world of sport.

DOWNEY TO FIGHT MALONE TODAY

Aurora, Ill., June 13.—Bryan Downey of Columbus and Jock Malone of St. Paul will stage their own personal middleweight championship elimination contest here today. The winner, it is understood, will be given first chance at a match with Johnny Wilson for the middleweight title.

CALZA PROVES HE FEARS NO MAT RIVAL

George Calza, the Italian champion, proved to the doubting fans last week that he wasn't afraid of Hal Christensen, the Danish champion in his bout at the Grand Opera House. He was certainly matched to meet Waldek Zbyszko at the Boston Arena on May 28 and to meet Christensen at Newark, N. J., on May 23. The sickness that he encountered through a bad lot of carbunckles made him to roll off these two bouts and Christensen and Zbyszko immediately said George wasn't sick but had shown the yellow and run out of these two bouts. Well, George called the Dane's bluff last week, and is ready to call Zbyszko's also but the unfortunate part of the affair is that Waldek has gone to Mexico for the Summer.

George, however, has shown that his heart is in the right place by accepting the challenge of Dick Daviscourt in a finish contest, winner take all. Daviscourt is the same class with Zbyszko and in meeting him Calza is meeting one of the most dangerous men in the game today. A win over Calza on Thursday night will put Daviscourt right back in line for championship honors.

To show the importance that Dick attaches to the contest we are told that he has cancelled all his other matches for the balance of the season and has never left Boston. He will remain right here and do all his training in a local Gym for the match. In the bouts of the evening Joe Pereill will meet John Carlson and Louis Andrews will meet a tough Irishman.

The show will be staged at the Grand Opera House. Reservations

PILLORY NEVER WILL BE RIVAL OF MORVICH

Pillory, the horse that won the Belmont Stakes Saturday, will now be called a rival of Morvich.

If Pillory should beat Morvich three times hand running next week Pillory would not be a rival of Morvich, because Pillory will never have Morvich's record as a two-year-old behind it.

Frisch is a great young ball player, but you cannot call Frisch a rival of Eddie Collins until Frisch has put behind him the record of accomplishment that Collins has. That will be some years from now

EAST BOSTON PROS WILL PLAY THE LAFAYETTES

The East Boston Professionals will play the Lafayettes of Salem at Wood Island Park next Sunday afternoon. The Witch City nine is considered much stronger than the Corsets of Lynn this season, and are out for the championship of the North Shore. The East Boston C. L. A., the pros and the East Boston A. A. Stars will have to divide in Sunday games at Wood Island on account of a new order issued by the Park Department.

MEDFORD FIELD DAY FOR ST. JOSEPH'S PARISH

St. Joseph's parish of Medford have planned to hold their annual field day on June 24 at Fulton street grounds. An athletic meet will be one of the features.

The list of events include 100-yard dash, 440-yard run, 880-yard run, one-mile run and three-mile run. There will also be a mile-run, one fourth of a mile to each man.

LONG SHOT DEFEATED ROTHSTEIN'S HORSE

Why did Sporting Blood, a horse owned by Arnold Rothstein, master gambler, lose at Aqueduct race course on July 13, 1920? Where was Rothstein's "smart" money in that race?

Reports were submitted to the Jockey Club in regard to that incident by James J. Cunningham who is now an absorbing figure in the Great Ward killing mystery. Cunningham, serving as an investigator for the Jockey Club, links the name of Rothstein with allegations of sharp practise in turf circles in 1920.

A politician, said by Cunningham to be in the confidence of race track men who were represented to be "putting over" horses for killings, is quoted in the Cunningham reports. The document adds:

"The morning of the race (at Aqueduct, July 13, 1920) Rothstein planned a coup with Sporting Blood, who was entered in a field of seven.

"Rothstein placed a commission in New York on that horse to win that morning. Before the race, however, the field was reduced to three. The price on Sporting Blood was quoted at 1 to 3, 1-5 to 1 on Dough Girl and 4 to 1 on Our Boots. The politician went and asked him whether or not he wanted to place a bet at that price.

"The latter replied that he did not so far as he was concerned, but to wait to hear what Rothstein had to say. One of his agents then came to us—and told him not to go with Sporting Blood This man —remonstrated, saying he thought it was dangerous, but on learning that Rothstein was betting on the horse to cover himself, agreed to the proposition.

Jockey Said He Had Received Instructions

"Barnett came to mount the horse and informed the trainer that he had his instructions already. One of the men close to the Rothstein interests instructed the politician to bet $100 for him on Our Boots to win at 4 to 1 and $400 on Dough Girl at the best price he could get.

"Although Dough Girl had opened at 15 to 2, the best price the politician could secure was 13 to 1. The race was won by Dough Girl, although she was staggering at the end and could have been caught easily by Sporting Blood in any part of the stretch, according to a conversation between a certain jockey and trainer. One Rothstein man profited to the extent of $4,700 on his own wager, besides what Rothstein bet.

"Rothstein boasted to an associate that it was the finest deal he ever had put over. He claimed to have bet $50,000 on Sporting Blood; $10,000 on Dough Girl at 15 to 1, and $20,000 on Our Boots. The only way he could lose would be by his own horse winning.

"The politician stated that he always had held Rothstein as a boob until the last year and advised all his friends to steer clear of him, but lately had become convinced that he is the shrewdest player on the track today.

Says Jack Rose Is Rothstein Henchman

"It is claimed that Rothstein becomes boastful at times and claims that his political insures him against trouble and that he prides himself as having been able to feel out at a profit to himself the largest owners in the game.

"The politician stated further that among Rothstein's henchmen are Jack Rose, the latter being the one who gained such great publicity in the 'Rosenthal case.'"

Rothstein denies the foregoing as well as other parts of Cunningham's report as concerns himself. Persons close to Rothstein have said that on the day of the "fraudulent incident," Rothstein bet $250,000 on Sporting Blood to win and was greatly taken back when the horse lost.

In his report to the Jockey Club, Cunningham mentions Rothstein as having made Commander J. K. L. Ross, noted Canadian sportsman and owner of Sir Barton, an object of his attacks. Cunningham at one time worked for Commander Ross. The report cites that the politician described in the Cunningham documents as a powerful influence in Queens County affairs, proved his knowledge of the movements of the Rothstein interests by tipping off Cunningham before various races. The report adds:

Information Delayed On Big Race.

"The operation would in turn relay this information to Commander J. K. L. Ross. Regarding the latter, Rothstein has seemed to make him a particular object of his attacks, due perhaps to the unpopularity of Trainer Bedwell, which makes it easy to talk business with a jockey against Bedwell and his associations.

"In a report compiled on Aug. 13, 1920, Cunningham gives alleged details of the last race at Saratoga. The report alleges that Cunningham and Johnny Loftus met and talked with a famous bookmaker. After some drinking, Cunningham says all three went to the track and continues:

"Just before the fourth race, operative interviewed the Queens County politician and asked him regarding the fourth race in which Donnacona was entered. He told operative that Maxie Hirsch was betting on Dinna Care. He also stated that Dough Girl had not got Dinna Care, but was afraid of Blue Wrack.

"It was evident that if there were any arrangements, Blue Wrack's people were not in on it. The politician told operative to see him before the last race, however, as he expected a good thing. Just before that race he told operative to bet on Tamarisk, which was a good thing.

"When the prices came out, operative mentioned to him that Intrigante seemed to be heavily played. The politician replied with a smile that perhaps she would be a good second. Operative signalled this information to Commander Ross. Tamarisk had a post position outside of Intrigante and when the barrier sprung gradually moved over sharply on the horses between her and Intrigante, as a result of which Intrigante fell.

"This was purely Jockey Pierce's fault, as the operative was watching every move he made. Intrigante gradually came back into trouble and that he prides himself as having been able to feel out at a profit to himself the largest owners in the game.

"The politician stated further that among Rothstein's henchmen are Jack Rose, the latter being the one who gained such great publicity in the 'Rosenthal case.'"

INVESTIGATOR FINDS COLLEGE SPORTS "FAIRLY CLEAN"

COLLEGE OFFICIALS HELD BLAMELESS

By JOSEPH S. ROGERS.
Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

New York, June 13.—Interesting, but in no wise convincing, is the "fairly clean" bill of health given college athletics by David H. Pierce, Syracuse alumnus, who made a so-called nation-wide investigation of professionalism among the higher institutions of learning.

Just what "fairly clean" means, Pierce does not make plain. An athlete is either an amateur or a professional. There is no step between the two. A college either conducts its sport cleanly or it does not. There can be no halfway mark.

Mr. Pierce, it seems, wrote to all of the leading colleges and universities of the country telling them he had a brother who was a "wiz" at everything that had anything to do with sports, asking them what "inducements" they had to offer.

When it is considered that no evidence has ever been uncovered to show that a recruiter or other college official ever offered to "buy" an athlete, Mr. Pierce's survey cannot be taken as deciding the issue.

In the connection, the experiences and attitude of Jim Thorpe are apropos. When the famous Indian was covering right field for Akron, O., in the International League two years ago, as he was at the same time making plans for his professional footballers, the Canton Bulldogs.

Thorpe said: "This stuff about colleges howling that we are taking their stars makes me sick. I have managed many professional football teams, and I have yet to make an offer to a college player.

"When I was playing football and baseball at Carlisle, I had innumerable offers to attend various colleges because of my athletic ability. These offers did come from any officials of the universities in question. But that is beside the point. The persons who are doing the hollering now about college stars turning professional are the very ones who, a few years ago, were offering me inducements."

The general conclusion to be drawn is that colleges do their utmost to keep athletics and their activities above suspicion of professionalism. They cannot be "fairly clean," as Mr. Pierce suggests.

Just as a general is not responsible for an unauthorized act of one of his soldiers, neither can a college be held responsible for every act of its undergraduates. This is in reference to the sensational charges of professionalism made in the Middle-West last Fall.

BASEBALL WAR TALK ON BARNSTORMING

Having nothing better to occupy them at this time, those gentlemen who head the various and sundry major league clubs seem about to declare another interleague war over the antibarnstorming rule so favorably voted upon by the Hey diee circuit.

American League magnates, notably Rupper Huston and Ban Johnson, are visibly annoyed by the National League's attitude toward barnstorming since it fails to serve their best interests.

The memory of Babe Ruth's suspension, so recent as to be still quite poignant, has lined up the American League forces against the rule which forbids players of championship teams to play exhibition games after the season is over, and they are all for doing something about it.

When Johnson gets around to the matter, it is expected that a vote will be taken as a means of sounding the American League opinion on the rule and the same forwarded to Judge Landis for favorable consideration.

Failing to gain this promise to do everything within reason to make the National League lot a merry one.

Judge Landis.

The findings of the National League on the rule in question are not deemed to have been influenced by a spirit of animus, yet they are so construed by the American magnates. The latter have been going on the assumption that the law, whereby Ruth, Bob Meusel and Bill Piercy were suspended until May 20, would be abrogated before the end of the present campaign.

Just why they felt so assured on this subject is not clear since Judge Landis has yet to go on record either as opposed to or in favor of the law as it stands.

It is believed that the Yankees signed Ruth and Meusel this season with the understanding that win or lose in the American League race they would be permitted to barnstorm next Fall until cold weather drives them indoors.

Judge Landis is not generally given to passing along private assurances of his future conduct in public, but if the Yankees received none it looks as though they were a bit headlong in their promises to the players in question.

HUB GOLFERS TRAIL N. Y. TEAM

By FRED G. THAYER.

The New York delegation, representing the newspaper interests, annexed the Editor and Publisher Cup by defeating the Boston and Washington newspapers golfers, in a massing a total of 67 points to Boston's 43½ and Washington's 2½.

The late arrival of the Boston's contingent delayed the starting of the morning matches so that the afternoon four-ball matches did not get under way until after 3 o'clock, and many played without their customary mid-day lunch.

The Boston delegation were escorted from the bout by the rubber-neck buses to the Engineer Club in Roslyn, Long Island, where the inter-city matches were played.

In the morning the matches were arranged in three-ball matches on the Nashua scoring system, New York winning 53 points to Boston's 32½ and Washington's 2½.

The best individual gross morning prize went to Grantland Rice who negotiated the difficult Engineer's despite wicked winds which prevailed throughout the day. R. Wash of New York won second gross individual honors with an 84.

In the heavyweight class A. P. Owens of New York with a 110 took first prize and second went to G. H. Lannon of the Boston Post. W. J. Delhaney, secretary of Boston Publisher's Association, took first prize in the lightweight championship, with P. S. Campbell of New York, second, John G. Anderson, former Bay State champion, had the most pars and Joe Kerwin of New York won the cartoonist trophy.

Singles—L. B. Patton, 2½; F. E. Lowery, 3; A. M. Hoxie, 2½; F. G. Thayer, 4; Joseph Lagana, 3½; A. L. Fowler, ½; I. M. Barry, 3; Moseley Taylor, 3; Frank E. Dunne, 3; F. P. Collier, 3½; total, 32½. Four-ball matches—Patton and Lowery, 2; Hoxie and Thayer, 2; Fowler and Legorio, 2; Barry and Taylor, 2; Dunne and Collier, 2; total, 10.

KID NORFOLK DEMANDS BATTLE WITH GREB

Kid Norfolk.

By RINGSIDE.

They call him the Black Phantom!

And when he fights he usually has to give away fifteen to twenty-five pounds. But as he usually wins, he doesn't worry about such a little thing as weight.

The negro star is under the management of Leo P. Flynn, who is making more money out of boxing game than any man in America. And Norfolk is one of the chief reasons why Leo is rapidly closing in on John D. Rockefeller and the other billionaires.

Norfolk and Greb Would Make a Great Fight

Tex Rickard then bid for a bout between Greb and Carpentier. The Frenchman turned down the match on the claim he is billed for a couple of engagements in Europe.

And what a fight this would be! Norfolk is every bit as fast as Greb, knows as much about the fine points of the ring game and can outpunch the Pittsburgh man.

Norfolk realizes he would be unable to defeat Dempsey in a long bout, but figures he would have a chance against the champion in a match of limited duration.

"Why all this bunk in the Boston American about the negro heavyweights. Jack Johnson displayed himself when he held the title and should never be given an opportunity to redeem himself.

"As for Harry Wills, he has no right to expect a match with Dempsey. He's a colored fighter and must pay for Johnson's sin

What do YOU think about a bout between Dempsey and one of the negro heavyweights? We shall be glad to publish any letters the fans may care to send to this office

CONNELLY CLUB WILL PLAY AT DORCHESTER

Boston Twilight League folks, just stop and think tonight where you are going. There are two banner up good games scheduled for this evening in the league. One will take place at Ronan Park, Dorchester, and the other at Rindge Field, Cambridge.

Claude Davidson's Dorchester Baseball Club will entertain the J. J. Connelly Club of Roxbury on the looks of Mt. Ida, and by the looks of things this will be an interesting battle.

Although the Roxbury nine is in the second division it will bear watching, as it has been greatly strengthened by the addition of Tommy Gildea, former Boston College coach, and Otto Deininger of major league fame, who is playing the initial corner.

This aggregation carries a few good willow swingers and their eyes will be peeled to land on the agate and try their luck at walloping it over the enclosure.

This stunt has yet to happen, but remember this, if King, the youthful twirler of the visiting club, connects with one of Kroeg's slants he'll bust it over and out.

At Cambridge there will be action galore. Malden Knights of Columbus, led by Jim Flanagan, will battle with the well-known Dan Leahy North Cambridge Knights of Columbus. Now in order for Daniel to mark time with the Lion in the Den and hold onto first place he has to win tonight's pastime; while on the other hand a defeat for Malden might send it whirling into the second division by the time the week is out.

Flanagan will use either Glennon or Queen on the mound, and North Cambridge will have the services of Jimmie Fitzgerald, the smiling port-sider. This will be some baseball tussle and the cars will be well jammed along around 6 o'clock.

ST. MARK'S PUTS STRONG TEAM IN FIELD

St. Mark's Catholic Club has recently reorganized its baseball team and will be represented on the diamond this season by a fast semi-pro team which will play twilight, Saturday and Sunday baseball.

C. and John McGonigle, of Chelsea K. of C. for the box.

Twilight games will be played every Wednesday on Ashmont Playground, Dorchester. The game scheduled fortomorrow evening will be with the J. J. Chittick council, K. of C.

Those teams desiring games for twilight, Saturday or Sunday afternoons may call the business manager, Charles E. Maltby at the club house, 168 Ashmont street; telephone Dorchester 02369.

Big Job for East Boston

The Lafayettes of Salem will visit East Boston next Sunday to clash with the East Boston Pros. The Salem team is considered one of the strongest in New England.

KILBANE TURNS DOWN $50,000 GUARANTEE

BY ED CURLEY

New York, June 13.—Johnny Kilbane, the featherweight champion, who dropped into town Sunday morning, has left for his home in Cleveland. John came here to find out where he was at regarding a fight.

He remarked that as he had received no real offer from a promoter he couldn't see the advantage of hanging around the big town. Therefore back to the home mansion.

There was one offer, however that Kilbane received which he turned down with disdain. It was a proposition to fight Charley Beecher for a guarantee of $50,000.

"I wouldn't slip on a glove for that sum," smilingly replied the champion. Persons who overheard this declination dropped "lifeless" to the floor. That retort also made Beecher's manager, Phil Bernstein, run out and holler for a doctor.

CONCORD TEAM BEATS OLYMPIA ALL-STARS

Through the masterly pitching of Al Davidson, the Concord Town Team annexed its fourth straight victory of the season last evening, at the expense of the Olympia All-Stars of Boston, 11 to 1, in a seven-inning game on the Concord Centre playground. Only one hit and one run was made off Davidson's delivery. He fanned eighteen batsmen.

The man who names
The Pullman cars
Must be quite sane
Compared with those Who go around
"Inventing" and "Improving"
The things we use.
So many improvements
Have been made
In drinking water fountains
That you can't discover
How to get a drink.
In fact, a friend of ours
And got it
Down his neck.
On the golf links
They've fixed the sand boxes
So that there's no place
To lean your clubs
And it's increasingly difficult
Many couch hammocks
Are so complex
That after you've succeeded
In getting them adjusted

And go to bed.
But the worst of it is Unless you try
The new "improvements"
You're an old conservative
Of being that.
So when we tell you
That we have union suits
Without a single button
And golf knickers
Without buckles or buttons
And buttonless pajamas
And belts without prongs
And cuff links without links
We don't know whether
We're doing you a favor
Or "taking you in"
And feeling as we do
We wouldn't tell you
If we couldn't add
That we also carry
All these articles
Made the good old way
Without any improvements.
WE THANK YOU.

RUPERT HUGHES' GREATEST NOVEL

What Would YOU Do?

IF you were beautiful, young Remember Steddon, a Massachusetts minister's daughter, whose sweetheart died before the wedding, would you try to bring up your baby among those who knew you in your own home town? Or would you run away for a fresh start with new surroundings? If you had your living to make, would you try to get into the movies? Dr. Bretherick, the family physician, advised Remember to go to California. This she did, writing her parents a fictitious tale of having married and lost her "husband.' She is thrown in with a movie company, and Tom Holby, leading man, gets her a chance. She makes a hit in a close-up picture and is out in a terrific desert sand storm. She falls from a cliff and is told that the accident caused the death of her unborn child. This struggle of a young girl to work out her own salvation is stirringly told in Rupert Hughes' greatest novel. Go on with the story.

Remember stood for a moment petrified. Bodlin would recognize her. He would ask about the husband he had so frankly envied!

Now she felt an exile, indeed, and an unalterable loneliness, without her lover, her child, her own people, or even the familiar scenes that might have given her inarticulate consolation. The old trees about the old house would have waved their arms above her, and murmured mysterious broodings over the mystery of despair. The very trees were foreign.

On an impulse she wrote a long letter to her mother, inclosed it in unsealed envelope, and inclosed that in a sealed envelope addressed to Doctor Bretherick. After the letter was mailed she wished she had never sent it. It could only carry dismay into her lonely mother's soul. But it was as impossible to recall as a scream shot into the air. She imagined all consequences but the one that came about.

The last of her money went to pay the doctor a bill, and she was a sick pauper. She resumed her mental work gradually as her strength returned, but her distaste for it grew to loathing. The Hendricks, her employers, were kind to her, but they were master and mistress, and their own lives were hard.

She was weak and woebegone, at the bottom of the cliff of life. She had never climbed very far, but she had fallen far enough to give both soul and body an almost fatal shock

She was ashamed of her past, and her future was as dismal as the desert and as full of cactus. She was a drudge in a poor family in a deserted settlement abandoned by all that could get away

The only inferiors she could see were a young widow named Inez and her five-year-old boy, Terry Mrs. Inez took in washing. During the Winter she was overworked, during the Summer she was undernourished

She did the heaviest laundry for the Hedricks, and when she called for it she usually brought her boy along for lack of someone to leave him with. The child had the infantile genius for improving the world by imagination, and made a brilliant adventure of the errand. He owned a rickety express wagon left behind by some visitor child, and it gave Terry all the uplift of a fiery chariot. His mother would set the bundle of wash in the wagonette and immediately it became a magnificent truck, an automobile, or an airship, and the boy a team of horses, a motor, or a winged aviator, as his whim pleased

His mother caught a little cheer from Terry's inexhaustible rapture, and Mem, seeing them move along the road to their shack, felt such pity for them that she gained a little dignity from the emotion, since pity is a downward-looking mood.

Her sympathy was quickened, perhaps, by the frustration of her own motherhood. Nature had begun to prepare her spirit as well as her flesh for maternal offices, and somewhere in oblivion was a half-completed little child doomed to perish before it was born. That tiny orphan wailed in the porches of Mem's heart complaining that its destiny, begun in romantic dreams, had ended in sacramental catastrophe. Famished of love, Mem fed upon the widow's boy.

It hurt Mem to see how sorry a future Terry Dack could expect. The children of the Indians were less unlucky, because, like the children of negroes, they entered a world that made them no promises.

But every American white child has a chance at wealth and the Presidency of the United States as his inalienable birthright. Yet Terry Dack began with no inheritance but handicaps.

He would have no opportunity in Palm Springs for anything but the humblest future. He would grow up to a few scraps of public school education. His father was already dead and his mother only half alive. She had been a pretty thing once, and she loved to tell Mem of her life on a ranch near Whitewater. As a little girl she had owned her own horse and ridden it. As a young "sage hen" she had been the belle of ranch picnics and parties. She had married a glorious young cattleman, whose father went broke because his herd of cattle was smothered in a sandstorm. The son had soon after been torn to pieces by the teeth of a vicious horse he had tried to break to the saddle.

Became a Slave

Then all the joy and velocity had gone out of Mrs. Dack's life and she had become the best slave of a washboard, her arms forever elbow deep in suds.

The boy Terry was of the Ariel breed. His fancy drifted to earth in forty minutes. The world was a stage to him; an old boot as effective as Cinderella's glass slipper; the clothesline was a private telephone wire.

He had an eye for mannerisms of walk or posture. His vision owned a photographic detail, his ear a phonographic skill for record and repetition.

Ignorant and young as he was, he could merely sketch the emphatic features of the people he cartooned, but in the outline there was always a likeness that made his mother or Mem cry out the name of the subject at once. Terry would usually preface his performance with a:

Impersonation

"Looky, mamma! This is the way old Mis Reddick walks. This is the way you do, mamma. This is what the old Indian squaw does when she weaves baskets with her hands and uses her feet to work the rope that scares the birds from the fig trees. This is the way, mamma, you wash cloves and wring 'em and hang 'em up to dry."

Sometimes his mimicry was terrifying. He would repeat things he had overheard in the street from careless men; he would imitate some drivelling he had learned from an Indian or Mexican or American boy or girl, or from the little devil that curls and flatters in every child's own heart, as the worm in the apple.

His mother and Mem would look at each other in the dismay that comes to grown-ups when they see the ignorance of babyhood vanishing like down for a peach. They were afraid of what life in their wicked little world would do to their little idol.

Terry would weep with vexation at an inattentive audience or at his inability to express what bubbled inside his little kettle of a chest. He would weep when angered, but at no other time. Pain, grief, disappointment, terror, loneliness would bring no tears, no sobs.

She exercised her acquired skill in making up little dramas to while away the tedium of the long nights and to lull the wakeful child's mind from that loneliness.

Among all the rich nights of human experience, from the perfect night that Socrates praised, the more than royal luxurious night of dreamless sleep, to the glittering reveries of a Trimalchian banquet, no nights are more precious than those sombre hours a mother spends at the bedside of a sick child.

It was during this long heartache that Mem received the second letter that found her in Palm Springs. This was from Leva Le Moure, saying that she had just seen in an old paper a paragraph describing Mrs. Woodville's fall from the mountain and her miraculous escape from death. Leva pressed the utmost sympathy and prayed that her beauty had not been marred. She added,

Working in Dark.

"But if it has, you can still find something to do in the movies I've given up trying to be an actress and taken a position in the laboratory projection room, correcting the films. It's cool and dark and interesting, and far better than that miserable oven. I think I can get you a place, if you will come up. Los Angeles is the only town in the world that's alive three days, and there's no excuse for a woman of your education and charm wasting her sweetness on the desert air. Do come! I've seen my three children out to their uncle's ranch. You could live here with me and my friends."

The thought of working in the dark and the cool was a hint of Paradise to Mem, but she would not leave Terry Dack while he was ill.

Early one evening she went to the drug store to fill a prescription and found a stranger sprawled across a showcase, talking.

His voice startled her, though it was so slow and lazy that the druggist found it almost a sopor ific.

"I been out on the old Picacho mountain pros'-pecktin.' I went over it once with an old pardner o' mine—name of—well, I always called him Woodhead. He went batty on me 'count of a water hole not havin' no water into it."

Mem stood for a moment, petrified. All but the voice was gone. It was scurrying like an alarm bell in a steeple.

This was the man Bodlin she had talked to in Yuma. She had told him that her husband was alive and that she was going into the desert with him.

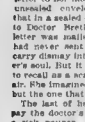
RICH GIRL, POOR GIRL

By Virginia Terhune Van de Water

Copyright, 1922, by Star Company.

ADELAIDE wondered, then told herself that it was an accident that had moved him to do this on the day after her mother's open ing. Of course he was busy. That was the reason he did not inquire about her upon his bi-daily visits to Mrs. Hollingshead.



SHE FOUND HERSELF CHANTEL TO HIM

Yet, if he really liked her, the little attendant, very much, he would have made some excuse for asking for her

She wished that he had done this, so that she might explain to him why she had slipped out of Mrs. Hollingshead's room as he entered it the other night. Yet her pride forbade her seeking an opportunity to speak with him.

If he did not care to see her, she said to herself, she did not care to see him.

The very vigor with which she made this assertion was proof that it was insincere. But she did not know that.

At heart she was slightly sore. She had been in a happy dream, and now she was waking to

All of which conditions were favorable to the agreeable impression that Richard Hollingshead hoped to make upon the homesick girl.

Every day he asked her if she would like to be driven home Only twice did she accept this offer and upon both occasions he accompanied her to the hospital, waiting in the limousine until she came out again. At other times she declared that she preferred to walk and that she needed the exercise. Richard had the tact not to combat this decision. When she went alone, she stopped in to see Jennie on her way home.

Mrs. Brown was doing wonderfully well. So well, in fact, that at the end of a week it did not seem necessary for Adelaide to visit her quite so often—especially as Mrs Hollingshead continued seriously ill.

She was thankful that this had not been necessary at any time during one of the physician's visits. She felt a strange shrinking from having him see her disagreeable as Patricia Hollingshead. Gradually she was becoming accustomed to taking the part with Miss Johnson as a witness. But to do this in the presence of either the father or the physician would have been painful to her. She knew that Henry Hollingshead would scowl and scowl at her in the guise of his daughter, so aided and abetted her in her efforts to avoid it

And, all the time, Richard Hollingshead was paying her kindly but unobtrusive attentions. She wondered how she ought to receive these—whether convention would demand her rejection of the flowers he ordered for her, or the candy which came from some fashionable confectioner.

Once when she began a protest he checked her. "Please," with the half-sad smile he has assumed lately, "do not tell me not to gratify myself the pleasure of ordering a little gift for you occasionally. You remember cannot have such things now—and Patty—is gone and I miss doing the little things that I have always been in the habit of doing for them. Besides—dear girl—it makes me happy to have you accept these trifles"

She was growing sorry for him. His appeal to her pity moved her more than his former aggressiveness had done.

Not that she cared for him. But she found herself grateful for the friendliness towards her at this time when the physician's seeming indifference disappointed her. Of course, she did not analyze her feelings in the matter.

SERENADE BLUES	GOOD-BY, SWEETHEART
REFRAIN
Then with that melody start in to playing,	And I from thee my leave am taking,
Forget the artist and the olden ways,	With bliss too brief, with bliss too brief, with bliss too brief.
But like the smartest of our modern days	How sinks my heart with fond alarms,
That even Paderewski would choose the jazzy Serenade

WHEN A GIRL MARRIES

Copyright, 1922 King Features Syndicate, Inc.

WHEN Tom Mason looked up in the doorway of Jim's office it seemed as if he'd brought with him a second and ghostly figure. I felt a sudden return of my first impression of him back in the early days of my marriage. I presented him to Mabel Storrs, and as they exchanged words of greeting, I wondered which she saw—the man I am beginning to like and trust or the visible Tom?

MABEL WAS FRANK AND FRIENDLY

Big and indolent in his movements, with his keen rapier-like face, narrow of eyes and with that oddly contradictory full mouth, Tom bears the outward signs of his philandering and luxurious nature. Would Mabel find the loyal friend, the square-dealing, fact-facing man under his physical aspect?

Her manner was frank and friendly—amazing even. It worried me from the first.

"You've come to help us, haven't you?" she remarked with a quiet assurance. "We can use a man's judgment in a few of the things that are bothering us."

"I'm glad you have a welcome on the door for me, Miss Storrs," said Tom gayly. "For your friend, Donna Anna, is a proud lady. She never sends out S O S calls to her friends. So if my cousin Evvy Mason hadn't adopted the cause of Harrison versus West by the simple means of butting in, I suppose I'd be anywhere but here now. And what makes it all wrong is that I've begged to be allowed to prove my friendship for Jimmie and Mrs. Harrison.

"Oh, shucks, you don't mind if I stick to the name that suits her and call her Donna Anna, do you? Of course you don't—you're a regular fellow," announced Tom, as if he'd been discussing the Harrisons with Mabel Storrs since grammar-school days.

"Of course, I don't!" Mabel said, adapting herself to the occasion, and Tom, without the least sign of effort or strain. "Donna Anna is as right for Mrs. Harrison from one point of view as 'Lilac Princess' is from another."

"Rights! Why shouldn't you remind me that James H. Harrison has a sense of appreciation of his own?" chuckled Tom good-naturedly. "I'm used to being put in my place, Miss Storrs. But in the olden days when the timid little bride thought I was an ogre fattening on hearts she never put me back except by being more timid and sweetly than you managed it just now. No hard feelings, however. Are you free for lunch? I'm going out to lunch and discussing Cousin Evelyn and her message in comfort?"

Tom certainly has a way with him. Mabel accepted, with only a preliminary:

"Do you think it will be quite all right for us to leave the office?"

"Anything here that matters?" asked Tom succinctly. "Has any one here to take care of a message if one come along that does matter?"

"No, to the first—yes, to the second," replied Mabel.

I'd never before seen Mabel in masculine society, and the frank simplicity with which she responded to Tom puzzled me. While we were making arrangements to leave, and, later, as we were riding first in the elevator which carried us to the street, then in a taxi that bore us to our prospective luncheon, Tom and to carry us off like this? Why did cussion of things which they seemed immediately to discover as mutual interests. And I sat back and wondered what it was all about.

Why were we permitting Tom to carry us off like this? Why did he and Mabel take each other so completely for granted? Was it simply because they were two fine persons who like each other —or was Tom at his old tricks?

WORN OUT AFTER SHE COOKED A MEAL

Took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Read the Result

Cincinnati, Ohio.—"I suffered for a year with nervous troubles and irregularities before I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. My back pained all the time and I was unfit to do housework. I was worn out if I cooked a meal and was unable to do my washing. My girl friends and my sister told me if I would take your Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills I would be relieved. After taking the first bottle I felt better, and neglected it awhile, but found I could not do my work until I was stronger. So I took the Vegetable Compound again and now I am the mother of a 19 months old boy. He is fat and healthy and I am sure I could never have carried him if it had not been for your medicine. I recommend your medicine to all women although I am young to be advising some one older."—Mrs. Ernest Parmory, 218 W. Liberty St., Cincinnati, Ohio.

Yes, Girls

Everybody is using and talking about DERWILLO, the liquid tint. It instantly beautifies the complexion, makes a soft, rose-white skin; everyone "just owes to touch." DERWILLO

By ANN LISLE

Condon and Irma Warren passed in procession through my mind On almost any other score I should have been sure that Edward Storrs could take care of herself, but I found myself bristling protectively over this spontaneous-combustion friendliness with Tom Mason.

After we'd settled ourselves at our table and had acquiesced to Tom's generous suggestion that three dozen oysters would make a good start, he fairly lunged at us with his story.

How to Make Strawberry Jam For 10c a Half-pound Glass

Entirely New Method That Never Fails and Takes Only Ten Minutes

Everyone loves strawberry jam. For a spread on bread or hot biscuits, nothing seems to equal it. Its wonderful flavor makes delicious cake filling. Until now, however, an expert was required to make it. It will now, also, it has been expensive. Certo, a natural product of fruit, has solved the problem so that everyone can make and eat this delicious conserve.

To Make Strawberry Jam by the Certo Process:

Crush well in single layers about two quarts of ripe berries, using wooden masher and discarding all green parts. Measure 4 cups crushed berries, add the juice of one lemon and 7¼ heaped cups (3¼ lbs.) sugar into good sized preserving kettle. Mix well; stir hard and constantly. Bring to vigorous boil and boil hard 1 full minute, continually stirring. Take from fire and add ½ bottle (scant ⅓ cup) Certo, stirring it in well. Let stand 5 minutes only, by the clock, stirring occasionally; skim and pour quickly into sterilized glasses. Result is 10 half-pound glasses of strawberry jam for total cost of 70 cents (strawberries at 30c a box) Paraffin with raspberries, blackberries, dewberries and loganberries.

Important: Best way to cook Jams and Jellies in open glasses. Cover while hot with thin coat hot paraffin. Next day add tablespoonful hot paraffin to seal cracks around edge formed by shrinkage on cooling.

This Certo process banishes all the guesswork or worry, as perfect results are certain. Unlike the old method of "pound for pound" mixture boiled for thirty or more minutes, with consequent loss of fruit juice and flavor being boiled away, the economical Certo Process requires only one minute's boiling and thereby saves all the fruit to produce a natural, delicious jam.

Certo is pure—contains no gelatins or preservative. Jams and jellies made this way last indefinitely. Certo positively saves time, fruit, flavor and guesswork. It makes all kinds of jams and jellies with fresh or canned fruit—some you have never made before. It is highly endorsed by national authorities and cooking experts. Every woman who tries it recommends it to her friends and says she'll never be without it.

The above recipe and nearly 100 others are in the Certo Book of Recipes which will be given to you by your grocer when you get Certo. Extra copies sent free if you write to the Pectin Sales Company, Inc., 105 East Avenue, Rochester, N. Y.

Get a bottle of Certo from your grocer or druggist today. Start the new—the sure, quick, economical way of making jams and jellies. You'll never return to the old "hit or miss" methods.

If your grocer or druggist does not have Certo, please telephone Miss Dwyer, Ft. Hill 1614, to learn where to obtain it.

FINANCE —AND— BUSINESS

By B. C. Forbes

We have more money ready and eager to be put to work than is realized. Our Federal Reserve Banks are carrying almost $1,500,000,000 less rediscounted paper than a year ago and new capital continues to be provided by investors in enormous volume for business use and business expansion. The low rental rates now charged are stimulating enterprise and serving to send up the market value of outstanding securities. Finding employment for funds now idle cannot fail to bring full-time employment throughout this country within the next few months.

* * *

The productivity of workers has increased substantially. The process of readjusting wages is now nearing completion. Labor costs, therefore, are once again on a reasonable basis.

* * *

The railroad outlook, to my mind, hasn't been so favorable in quite a number of years. The industrial area that before long our principal transportation companies will be enjoying all the traffic they can handle. Indeed, there is real danger that our transportation facilities will prove altogether inadequate when business prosperity returns.

The rate reduction going into effect on July 1 will be very largely offset by the wage reductions scheduled for the same date, provided, of course, rebellion by railway employees does not ignore all present calculations. Meanwhile, car loadings have materially increased despite the coal strike now nearing the end of its third month.

It is also gratifying to note the railroads are actively preparing for the bigger business which looms ahead; orders for new freight cars since January 1 are 15 per cent. greater than the total orders placed in the whole of last year and equal to the grand total for 1920.

* * *

Wool maintains its high price level; Pennsylvania crude oil was marked up last week, as also was gasoline at some points, and the whole oil industry is extremely active; commercial failures are on the decrease; new corporations are being chartered in greater numbers than the Pennsylvania Railroad last month handled more perishable freight than in any previous month in its seventy-five years of history; buyers' confidence has been strengthened by the further advances recorded by the leading index numbers.

* * *

Coca Cola rallied 3¾. Kelly Tire was up 3 points; American Woolen, the American Sugar, 2¾, and Allied Chemical, 2¾.

FINE COMEBACK STAGED.

After an opening in which losses and gains were quite evenly distributed the market staged a comeback which restored to the active stocks a good part of the losses sustained in Monday's precipitated tumble.

Commission houses reported a substantial response to suggestions to commence to take advantage of the reaction to acquire a new line of stocks at attractive prices with the result that buying orders crashed the market inconsiderable volume, relieving the market of the pressure of sales from speculators unable or unwilling to respond to the calls for additional margins.

A careful check up on underlying conditions failed to reveal the presence of any new factors that might hold responsible for the break in the market and hence it was attributed to the over-bought condition of the market itself and the activities of professionals campaigning for lower prices.

DROPS FROM HIGHS.

An item of the day's news with favorable construction for the clearing stocks was the report from Washington that President Harding would call a special session of Congress to act on the ship subsidy bill should the regular session fail to take desired action.

Call money renewed at 3 per cent. Foreign cables were favorable and domestic business reports inspiring.

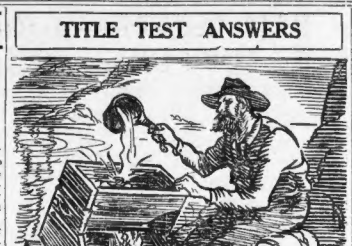
"MUTUAL" INSURANCE MEN GATHER HERE

Delegates from all over the State gathered in Boston today for the annual meeting of the Massachusetts Mutual Fire Insurance Association. The association is composed of seventy-five insurance companies, the oldest incorporated in 1823, and the youngest in 1856, and known in insurance circles as "dwelling house mutuals."

Burton S. Flagg of Andover presided, and the following officers were elected: Robert A. Barbour, Pittsfield, presidents; C. P. Farnce, Holyoke, and Harry Harrison, Worcester, vice-presidents; Charles F. Danforth, secretary and treasurer.

Mr. Barbour is one of the best known fire underwriters in the State. He is secretary and treasurer of the Hampshire Mutual Fire Insurance Company, and vice-president of the Reinsurance Bureau of Chicago.

TITLE TEST ANSWERS



Correct Title—Cradle.

Cradle—In gold-mining a machine for separating gold from auriferous gravel or sand. It resembles in form a child's cradle, and, like it, has rockers; hence also called a rocker, and sometimes, a cradle-rocker. This apparatus for washing gold is next in simplicity to the pan. It was extensively used in California in the early days of gold washing. —Century.

HUNTING REAL SLAYERS OF CARDINAL

William J. Fitzgerald, alias John J. Richards, and Thomas Duris, well known in sporting circles, are being sought by the police for the shooting of Edward Cardinal, alias Gardner, at Kingston Inn, Plymouth, December 3 last.

The authorities believe that one of the two men actually shot Cardinal, for whose murder Richard J. Rowland and James W. Wickham were placed on trial at Plymouth. Rowland, pleading guilty to manslaughter, was sentenced to four and one-half years. Wickham was freed.

Fitzgerald and Duris, now said by the authorities to have been the real slayers in the rum-running mixup, have been absent from their usual Boston haunts for some time, and all efforts to trace them have failed.

Little Maine City Leaves Boston Behind

With appropriate ceremonies the first municipal aviation field in Maine was dedicated at Brunswick yesterday. Simultaneously that city saw the inauguration of the first United States air mail service in that State.

The flying field at Brunswick is but the third municipal airplane station in New England. We believe that Boston should have the fourth. The broad expanse of the air is certainly the highway of the future. Why should not Boston, always a pioneer city, lead in the conquest of the air?

The money has been appropriated for Boston's flying field. The site is acquired. All Boston needs is hangars and airplanes.

Easy to Win? and to Lose

An invention is being exploited in a storeroom on Summer street. Small models of the device are dramatically operated. This draws crowds. After the head salesman has made a speech during which he cleverly insults the intelligence of all persons who do not immediately rush forward to buy stock and get rich, likely persons are singled out by individual salesmen and lead to small tables where the work of concentration to close a stock sale is applied.

Bright pictures are painted concerning the opportunities lost by those who failed to get in on the ground floor in the purchase of Ford Motor stock and other of the few industries which have paid out several thousands of dollars for one dollar of original investment.

Much is said of the thousands won in speculation. Nothing is said of the millions lost. If a smooth stock salesman grabs you by the arm and tries to get you to exchange your savings for his pieces of paper, remember Ponzi.

Where Is Our Chivalry?

Incongruous and foolish in these days of equal rights is the increasingly evident custom of making women watch men dine at civic and political banquets.

Hardly a city, State or Chamber of Commerce banquet is held that members of the fair sex are not invited to seats in the balconies that they may watch the male element gorge themselves. The strange part of it is that the women invariably accept such invitations.

It is certainly no compliment to the chivalry or common sense of the men that they are offered. It is unchivalrous.

Women should remind the men who are on committees of arrangements that the Creator endowed women as well as men with the organ known as the stomach. And after dinner persiflage must indeed be boresome without any alleviating comforts.

Money or a Laugh

Or You Can't Interest Americans

Copyright, 1922, Star Company.

Annenberg, Mose, older of the two wise Annenberg brothers—Max is the younger—says, "To interest Americans you've got to show them something that has money or a laugh in it."

True, unfortunately, as regards many of us. Give us money making in the daytime, laughter at night, and we call it the end of a perfect day.

Yet the things worth while have in them neither money nor laughter—or, if there be money, it is a mere by-product, not the main thing.

Columbus didn't laugh, you may be sure, while his sailors were rebelling. He did not make money, either. They put him in prison and he ended unhappily.

Scientists did not laugh or make money, they shivered with fright at the news that Galileo was in danger of his life for telling the truth, and they humiliated themselves by feebly protesting against the theory of the earth's motion, knowing all the time as well as Galileo that she really moved.

Lincoln, Jefferson were not money makers and they were solemn. Even Edison, although many have made millions out of his work, is constantly worried by the demands that new work makes upon him, and has less money than a thousand parasites that have thriven on his ideas.

If laughter and money make up your menu, as peanuts and capers make up the menu of the monkey in the cage, you may be sure that you will last in men's minds about as long as the monkey lasts in the memory of his caged fellows.

Did Hanna Say "Hell"

A bitter journalistic controversy is raging as to whether Mark Hanna did or did not use the word "hell" in speaking to Henry Cabot Lodge in 1896. A magazine diarist says he did, twice; Senator Lodge says "impossible."

We have been, in our time, concerned to know how old was Ann; who hit Billy Patterson; what Charles R. Crane said to the Syrians about French government; and how many knitting-needles it would take to reach the moon. We are, in short, able to take an interest in almost any topic. But this last one is too much.

If Mr. Hanna did not say "hell" on the occasion referred to, he did say it on others; and if he did not use profanity about Senator Lodge, then and always, he was a gentleman more able than most of us to resist temptation.

What then is the point of the dispute?

What Is a Flapper?

Editor Boston American:

Apropos of your notice at the bottom of the front page of the Boston American that "the 'flapper' is with us," I am actuated to ask a question that is trembling on the lips and echoing in the hearts of about one hundred millions of people, more or less, of this country. The question is "What is a flapper?" In a little less than a year's time I have put this question to fifty-nine intelligent and educated people. All answered with more or less promptness. Upon cross-examination, fifty-seven admitted they didn't know; one, a young lady, refused to define the term on the ground that she might incriminate herself, and the other finally told me to go to the devil."

I am supposed to have a fair education myself, having graduated from the fourth grade of the Perkins School at the age of eleven years. So while I hesitate to expose my ignorance I realize that I am growing desperate. Tearfully and supplicatingly, F. E. LADD, M.D.,

Single Tax

Editor Boston American:

In your issue of June 10, there appeared an editorial "Dividing the Sand." I agree with the view expressed, but the concluding sentence would seem to imply that Single Taxers were opposed to the private ownership of land. This is not so. All the Single Taxer advocates is the collection of the rental value of the land by the government, the title to remain with the owner as at present. This would secure the advantage of private possession of the land with the justice of common ownership of the value which the presence of the population gives to land. JOHN T. GIDDINGS.

Joins Knockers

Editor Boston American:

As a rule I am a booster, but this time must change to the Knocking Association. I wrote for a reservation of a $2.50 room at a Boston hotel and arrived a few days later and after registering was given a room without running water. Now, you know that New York City which is a little bigger than Boston, has a great many more hotels, mostly filled all the time and a person can get at any time a room with running water for $2.00. Now why not Boston? By giving this matter your attention and helping stop this profiteering you will confer quite a favor on the men who are compelled to travel for a living and particularly to the bigger cities where they must make a stay of at least one week.

Let Boys Be Comfortable

Editor Boston American:

I read of schoolboys being forced to keep their coats on in hot weather in your issue of June 10, and would like to say a few words against the injustice of the principals' actions. Forcing the school pupil to wear coats, collars and ties on hot days like those we have just been through is certainly not right, or healthy. A student has to be comfortable to work, the same as anybody else. The girls naturally are dressed comfortably, their dresses having low necks and short sleeves. Many of the teachers are also dressed the same way. Now, why pick on the boys?

Editor Boston American:

May I express to you and your representative our sincere appreciation of the friendly cooperation you extended to use during our recent Girl Scout activities. Your paper certainly covered our third annual review in splendid fashion.

WHO'S WHO'S WIFE OR HUSBAND

By Dr. Charles Fleischer

THAT story about Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, long the leader of the Woman Suffrage forces, always bears repetition.

We had occasion to use it the other day in connection with her statement that, if women had been given the vote twenty-five years earlier, their political influence during that period would so have leavened life as to prevent the recent war.

You recall the story. Some one teased her about the supposed misfortune of her name as a feminist leader. To which that splendid woman is said to have replied: "But I got it from my husband."

Without meaning to be impertinent, one is moved to ask: "Who is Mr. Catt?"

Indeed, one is likely to ask a similar question about any husband of a woman better known to fame. The writer recalls the spouse of another suffrage pioneer, the late Henry B. Blackwell.

He long survived his wife, Mrs. Lucy Stone. And yet, though he was himself considerable of a personality and a doughty fighter for all kinds of good causes, he was always known as the husband of his wife.

Even now he lives in the memory of Massachusetts militants for progress as the father of his better-known daughter, Alice Stone Blackwell.

The instances of these two suffrage leaders c..n mentioned to present the general query regarding the quality and amount of satisfaction which the husbands of such famous women must get from the public appreciation of their mates.

Indeed, this is one of those good rules which works both ways. For have not wives been obliged all these ages to enjoy vicariously the delights of fame and power and station?

After all, what difference has it ever made, and, above all, what difference now in these democratic days which one wins the approval of the world?

True love and mutual respect finds equal joy in one's own or in the other's achievement of recognition and success.

A becoming self-respect prevents envy or humiliation because one shines in the reflected glory of another. Indeed, there is the larger likelihood that you easily take too much satisfaction and credit from the success of those to whom you are related by whatever ties.

As, for instance, individual New Yorkers or Bostonians or Americans are apt to set down to their own personal pride account the creditable doings of their city or their nation. And when these are praised they preen themselves as though they, and not the larger group, had gained the glory.

To recur again to wife and husband, it is sweetly touching to note how really loving couples accept tributes about each other from those beyond their intimate circle, as though they themselves were thereby enriched.

Such is the marvel of love's multiplication and division.

EVER SLAP YOUR WIFE WITH A CARELESS REMARK?

Said a little woman recently, "I have always done everything I could to spur my husband on to greater things, and no one appreciates the hard work and personal effort he has made, under difficulty, to get on in his public work more than I, and I have always praised him and shown otherwise my appreciation, but I had the slap of my life when he anounced the other day:

"'Mrs. So and So is a mighty fine little woman. Her face is an inspiration to me when I preach. I just love to watch her changing expression and note the interest she takes in my words.'"

Now it seems that this good wife, whose face had reddened under the imaginary "slap," had been all that an appreciative wife should be, and was an inspirational delight with her husband's address at the moment in question as any other hearer, perhaps more so.

She had supposed that her presence was helping him to rise to the situation and putting the fervor into his speech, but in that thoughtless remark every bit of joy of the occasion was lost.

The strange part of it all is, that this dense man does not realize how stupid it is of any man who wants praise and inspiration at home, to acknowledge so naively that he is so charmed by a woman he had never seen before, because she took an interest in his words.

SEEN AND HEARD

By Daily

DR. JOHN CECONI, city epidemologist, bids fair to break all records for the administration of the Schick diphtheria test ever made in this country in a single day. On one of the hottest days that this city ever experienced, Dr. Ceconi "Schicked" 379 children, which is the record for one day's work in any city of the United States or Europe.

An interesting fact in regard to the Schick test is that New York and Boston are the only two large cities that have adopted the treatment. Dr. Schick of Vienna, the man who worked out the test and for whom it is named, is handicapped in applying it in Europe on account of the lack of funds in his country.

COUNCILLOR JAMES T. MORIARTY is receiving the commendation of his constituents and many friends for the introduction into the City Council of his resolution condemning Harvard College for its alleged discrimination of the Jews. Mr. Moriarty's original resolution was passed unanimously after a few minor changes submitted by COUNCILLOR HENRY E. HAGAN.

The Health Unity of the City in the West End, in charge of DR. CHARLES F. WILINSKY, is considered one of the best in any city of the State. The cosmopolitan atmosphere of that section of the city adds to the burden of the medical man in charge. Dr. Wilisky is always trying to improve upon the many features already in force there. He recently heard that New Haven, Conn., was showing something new in the line of Health Units and at his own expense made the trip to see the institution at first hand.

> "Boston will average as high as any city in the United States in the placing of men and women to work," declared LUKE E. SHIELDS, Commissioner of Employment of the city.

While it might be a little premature for forthcoming announcements of the candidates for the City Council, there seems to be no doubt that JOHN HIGGINS of the West End will soon make public his entrance into the field. Higgins lives in that district and will in all probability oppose the Lomasney candidate. He is popular. He was graduated from Harvard College. Entered the navy at the beginning of the war and served as paymaster and was retired with the rank of lieutenant. He is connected with the U. S. Veterans' Bureau and a training agent.

CITY COLLECTOR WILLIAM McMORROW since he has been in office has heard a number of excuses for the abatement of taxes, but the newest and most unusual one was that of a woman who asked that she be relieved of the burden of taxation because of the advent of twins in her home, born some six months ago. Proposition is of present under advisement.

GARRETT P. SERVISS ON CONSTANCY OF MOON

By Garrett P. Serviss

MR. J. W. C. of Lowell, Mass., meditating on the constancy of the moon in keeping always the same face toward the earth, inquires whether the following suggestion is tenable—viz., that "when the moon was in a more plastic state the earth's gravitation may have set up a sort of tide in the moon causing a greater portion of its mass to be on one side, and that the pull of the earth may tend to keep it so."

The idea is an old one, and its tenability was not doubted by George Darwin, as may be seen by a picturesque passage in his work on "The Tides." After developing his theory of tidal friction and its effects on the earth, he says:

"If this history be true . . . a corresponding series of changes must have taken place in the moon herself. Once on a time the moon must have been molten, and the great extinct volcanoes revealed by the telescope are evidences of her primitive heat. The molten mass must have been semi-fluid, and the earth must have raised in it enormous tides of molten lava.

Tides Become Solid

"Doubtless the moon once rotated rapidly on her axis, and the frictional resistance to her tides must have impeded her rotation. . . . She rotated, then, more and more slowly until the tide solidified, and thenceforward and to the present day she has shown the same face to the earth. . . .

"The earth tide in the moon is now solidified so that the moon's equator is not quite circular, and the longer axis is directed toward the earth. Laplace has considered the action of the earth on this solidified tide, and has shown that the moon must rock a little as she moves round this earth. In consequence of this rocking motion, or libration, of the moon, and also of the fact that her orbit is elliptic, we are able to see just a little more than half of the moon's surface."

Tidal Action of Earth

But Newton, long before Darwin, and before Laplace, showed that the tidal action of the earth would draw the moon's globe out slightly in the direction of the earth, and that as the moon solidified this would become a permanent deformity, making the moon's diameter greater in that direction than at right angles to it.

The slightness of the elongation of the moon, only 186 feet in a diameter of about 2,160 miles, may appear surprising, especially to those who have read theories about a possible lunar atmosphere existing on the side of the moon away from the earth, owing to a supposed displacement of the moon's centre of gravity to a point some thirty-three miles farther from the earth than her centre of figure. According to some of these theories the moon is egg-shaped, with the smaller end toward the earth. But neither mechanical laws nor observations support such an idea. Newton's conception is probably a fair representation of the actual shape.

Medbury Says

Father Thought She Was Borrowing Money When She Asked for a Couple of Smacks

Doctors have discovered bloodless surgery and painless dentistry, but what we need now is a way of sending our sweethearts home at night without hurting their feelings.

The average fellow knows what time to call on a girl, but very few of them know when to leave.

You can give a man his hat tell him to go, throw him out the door and slam it in his face, and then he can't even take the hint.

One father used to try to get rid of his prospective sons-in-law by turning the lights out. In two weeks he had everybody in town calling on his daughter.

He made it a practice of turning out the lights promptly at 10 o'clock, and that's the time they began to arrive.

This old man was so dumb he thought his daughter was borrowing money when he heard her ask her sweetheart for a couple of smacks.

He knew they were all right as long as he heard the piano going, but he didn't know this guy brought along an accompanist when he called on a dame.

The guy who played the piano didn't have to be much of a musician as long as he could play loud.

Once in a while he stayed an hour later and walked to work with the old man.

Of course it isn't always the parents' fault. A lot of times the girl wants to get rid of her caller. One dame said she never wanted to see her sweetheart again, so she married him.

If you want to get rid of your daughter's admirer it's all right to tell him he's a nuisance, order him out of the house and throw him out the gate, but you must never insult him.
